KiNetic energy flows working to liNk those who joiN within it. Now thiNk hard, go for the wiN and fINd where you belong. EntertaiN all notions. Decisions. iNstantaneous. High school is a time in your life that revolves around making split second decisions. You have to trust your gut and believe that your choice will serve you for the better. In such a comprehensive high school, there are, of course, thousands and thousands of comprehensive decisions to be made.

At North, students find themselves iNstantaneously attracted to specific academic and extra-curricular opportunities. Which classes should I take? Which teachers do I want? Do I want to study carpentry or graphic design? Child development? Or culinary arts? Do I want to join MVP? Do I want to eat lunch at the Riley tree today? The choices are as endless as your imagination.

You have to thiNk it. You have to want it. You can do anything you put your mind to. Just decide. Snap your fingers, it's done. It's iNstantaneous.

fiNd where you belong...

where will you spend your time?

The choices go beyond academics. Upon arrival freshman year, up until senior graduation in the spring, there are an abundance of opportunities and events - you don't ever really have to leave Lowell Ave. Buy your ticket to the school dance. Bring a blanket to the annual Thanksgiving Day Football Game versus Brookline High to combat the frigid fall air. Snuggle up at the Sophomore sleepover. Tackle at Powder Puff. You decide. Choose and pick your own path. Be an individual. Clubs. Sports. Concerts. Theatre. Music. Art. Or nothing at all. Don't be a follower - become a leader in and outside of the classroom.

He pondered while chewing on his pencil. Clubbing around Seniors Clayton Lloyd and Simone Weisman hold up their club sign to Junior David Polgar on Club Day. They were very successful recruiting new members at Club Day. daily Lecture Mr. Brown gives a speech with Junior Caroline Rodenberg in the Little Theater during Monday's X-Block. He explained how to get involved with performing arts at Newton North High School. Full swing Senior Will Rutherford swings his club for a hole-in-one during a golf match. He took his time to carefully plot where he would aim his swing. Teaching with a laptop Friends Senior Sandhya Nambudripad, Sophomore Katy Wong, and Senior Mackie McKenzie look on as they discover interesting wonders on the wireless internet. It was useful to them to have a laptop handy in the building. KODAK MOMENT Sophomore Ali Saminski smiles for the camera. She was stopped on Main Street for a quick photograph.

Dancing in the Moonlight Juniors Sabrina Lunin and Abby Ryan dance in their driveway with New Yorker-friend Chelsey Walker. After finishing their dance, they retreated back inside to watch movies. The Land of Milk and Honey While exploring the Old City of Jerusalem for all of one afternoon, Senior Becca Schumer bumps into her good Newton North buddy, Senior Adina Remz by complete surprise. The two girls hadn't been planning to meet up over 3,000 miles away from home but this was quite the coincidence! Out in the Community For 2 1/2 weeks this past July, Seniors Eliza Royer, Becky Fogel, Julie Caplow, Drew Vello, Mike Katz, Abby Fisher, and junior Lizzie Krushnik traveled to Nicaragua and worked within the community building schools, painting murals, and playing soccer with the school children. They built relationships with the local community, soaked up the sun, and got to know one another on another level as well. Jammin' Outdoors July 31, 2004 at the Hatchshell in downtown Boston was a sad day for 11,000 Dispatch fans who attended the band's last concert. Freshman Cayla Tepper joined the masses with a group of friends to bid farewell to the boys on a beautiful summer day.

An iNtermission from the norm

Camp. Career. Cape. No matter what you did last summer you were away from the mundane, celebrating your limitless freedom. Everyone looks forward to summer because it's the time of year when you don't have to hit the books or sit in a classroom all day. Summer is the time of year when people want to get out, laugh, and feel the sun. People always have strong summer memories, but now that we are in high school they change from playing on the swings with your friends all day to traveling around the world.

Last summer students did a variety of things, composing their own storybook of memories. Trips to Italy, Prague, Africa, Israel, an oasis on the beach. No matter what you did or where you went, it was a well deserved iNtermission.

Where did you go?
Who did you meet?
What did you learn?

STEP 1: PREHEAT

Going back to school is like baking a cake. There are ingredients and steps that go into it in order for it to be a success. The first step for most students is to "preheat" your brain. While it might sound cheesy and elementary, it's a proven fact by Newton North students that getting your brain functioning again is the key to a smooth transition from summer to school.

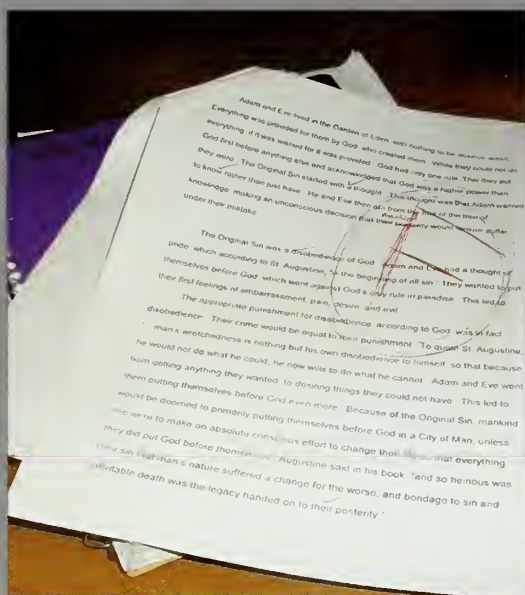

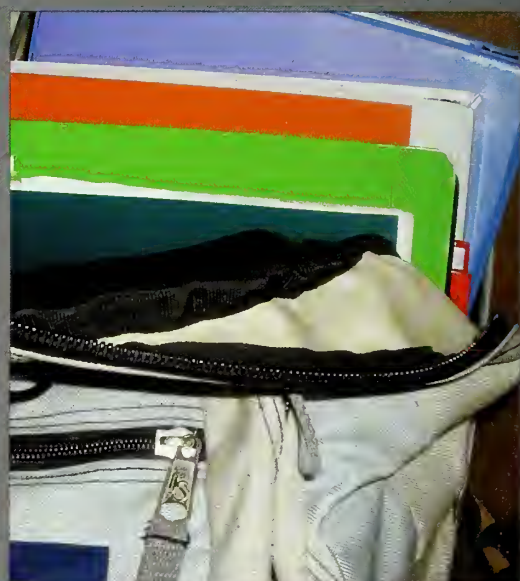

STEP 2: WARM UP

Sports are a big part of the North community. In August, preseason begins for fall athletes. "Warm up" your body by attending preseason to get back in shape for a fall sport. Start off the year on the right foot-literally.

STEP 3: INGREDIENTS

The ideal back-to-school preparation calls for the right ingredients. Since there's no way of knowing exactly what kind of materials your teachers will want you to have, it's good to stock up on binders, pens, and notebooks for the coming school year. Just walk into any Staples in August and you're sure to see at least one person you know.

STEP 6: FLIP IT AROUND

Old habits die hard. Think about how many times you skipped classes or failed a test. What are some better study habits you can look into? How can you make it a better academic year? Turn off the Instant Messenger and TV and straighten out your priorities.

STEP 7: WAIT FOR IT

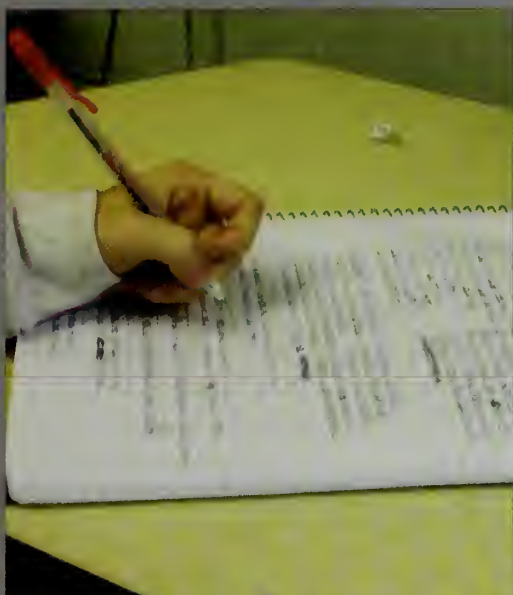

Take some time off from all this hard preparation. Besides, you're going to spend the next ten months working, so you should enjoy what's left of your free time. Make the most of your Labor Day Weekend—but keep in mind that it's almost back to school.

STEP 8: GARNISH

Every student wants to look his best when coming back to school. Back-to-school clothes shopping is a popular activity prior to the start of school. This year, you'll most often see students on Main Street sporting Hardtail or Solow pants, polos, and Tiger Athletic apparel.

STEP 4: MIX & STIR

Once you've measured out all your ingredients, it's time to set them up in just the right way. Labeling and putting loose leaf paper in binders for subjects can save stress when it's time to leave for the bus or take notes in class. Make sure you have an assignment book and that the printer has enough ink.

STEP 5: LET IT SET

Instead of staying up until three in the morning the night before school, get a good night's sleep. A few days before school, gradually start getting your sleeping pattern back to what it is during the academic year.

A RECIPE iN RETURN

Probably the most difficult time of the entire year for a high school student is going back to school. Summer is a time for late nights, and late mornings, without deadlines or worries about getting things done. But, by the last week of August, it's time to shift gears and get ready for another school year. Because you can't just snap your fingers and be ready for school; it is a lengthy process that requires students to apply themselves to get back on track and ready for another academic year. For many, this can be a traumatizing experience full of never ending lines at Staples and resetting the alarm clock to 6:15 am. But if there is a way to create a good organized list of what to do before September 9th, this is it. There are always steps to follow in preparing for the first day of school.

STEP 9: FINAL PRESENTATION

Presentation is key to making an impression on your consumers, or in this case, teachers and peers. Many students opt for haircuts, manicures, and some instances start showering daily again (Come on guys, who REALLY showers every day in the summertime?) Looking your best can help you feel like you can do your best.

STEP 10: THE ICING ON THE CAKE

So you're all ready for school. You've got new clothes, a new look, and you're both physically and mentally ready for the new school year at Newton North. The only thing left is to get up in the morning and go! Make it the best year you can.

It's getting easier to go back to school every year, even as a freshman. I usually follow a certain routine."

—Freshman, Stephi Rosser

If you follow these simple guidelines then four years will fly by in no time:

1. Be prepared

Take your notebooks and textbooks to class. Even though they weigh too much, you're better off with them than without; it will be easier to learn and understand what you're being taught.

2. The weather forecast is always wrong

With unpredictable heating and cooling, you can go from an eighty-degree Math room, to a frigid English class all within five minutes! This all-year long problem keeps North's students on their toes.

3. Memorize your path from class to class

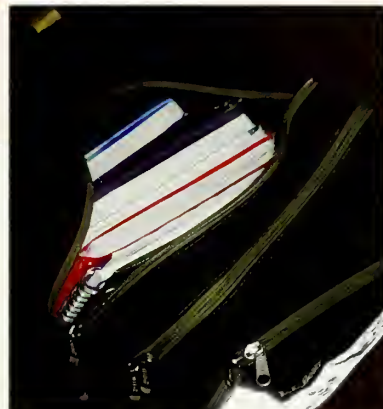

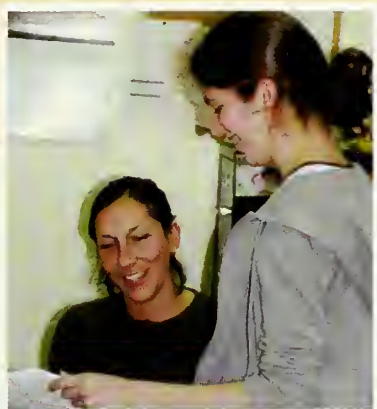

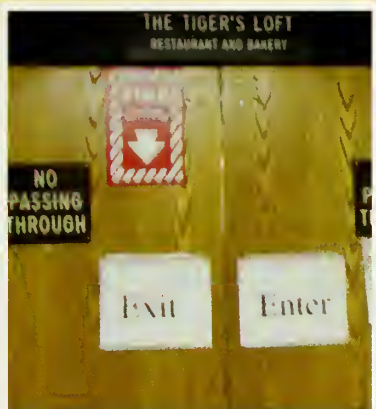

Know what stairs take you where and which to avoid. Keep away from the freshman trap, and watch out for the Art Department and Tiger's Loft road blocks dividing the fourth floor.

4. Don't be afraid...

Despite what some people say, everyone will help you. Seniors are nice, assuming of course, that they remember what being a freshman is like. Teachers and guidance aides are also there for you to answer questions, big or small, and help you along the way.

The Survival Guide to Newton North High School

*What to bring. What to wear.
Where to go. Who to ask.*

The first time you walked through the Elm or Hull street doors, what did you think of the school, building, and people? How did you learn how to find your way around? What about which stairs take you where? Or which hallways are surprisingly dead ends?

Sure it sounds scary at first, but you adjust. It's only a matter of getting used to it. You'll learn how to get through crowds, and to locate your friends. Coming back to school from a long summer is tough, but understanding these rules will make it easier. Good luck!

Road Block Tiger's Loft poses traffic problems for students who don't know their way around. This fourth floor hazard requires students to go down a flight of stairs, just to come right back up on the other side. Although it is nice to have a student run restaurant on-campus! Seeking Guidance Sophomore Nicole Censullo asks her guidance counselor for help with her schedule. The counselors are an important resource for any student, new or old. Back Breaking Heavy loads are eminent with all the textbooks and folders you need. Be prepared and bring everything, being organized is a must for school survival.

With all these books can we really blame the poor freshmen for wearing those big and bulky L.L. Bean backpacks? How do upperclassmen get around the shame of being caught with such monstrosities? They use their lockers.

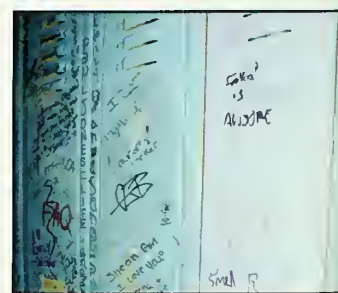

Lockers are great, that is, if you don't get stuck with one located in east bum, i.e. fourth floor blue. Not only will they hold your precious textbooks and folders but they're a great form of self expression. Personal items such as mirrors, photos, bumper stickers, and apparently nameplates, just in case the stress of school gives you memory loss.

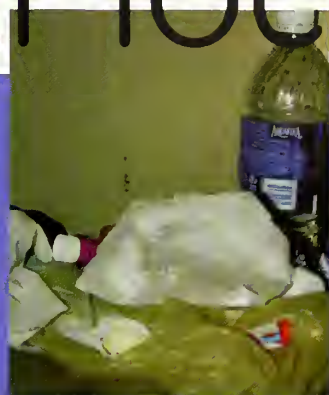

Some students have their lockers double as closets. It's nice to have a backup outfit just in case someone comes in wearing the same shirt as you. Oh, the horror!

Your locker says a lot about you, both metaphorically and literally. Students with treasured Main Street lockers like to decorate the outside of them with doodles, poems, lyrics, or a memo pad.

what's living in your locker?

Mold and rust, sweat and fungus. These are the creatures that grow and fester, attach to and reproduce in our small units of personal space: our lockers.

From rubber ducks with names and miniature decks of cards to jumbo bowls of ramen and numerous packs of assorted gum, when students come to school, they come with anything and everything. In a school with so many people, there is nowhere for individuals to express themselves as they do in their bedroom, but people have their own spaces. They have lockers. Even though you don't own your locker, it's your space. You can decorate it as you please, and put in what you like. It's your personal storage device. It saves your back from breaking and holds your textbooks during class. It can hold your backpack, which contains the rest of your life. Some lockers, though, are less an organizational tool, and more a garbage can. Half-eaten sandwiches and old, sweaty gym clothes abide in these odiferous places. From unclean to uncluttered, your locker reflects your unique style and personality.

INstyle

What is Newton North style?

North students wear everything.

Sometimes they dress up, and sometimes they dress down. Most opt for comfort during the school day.

North style is always changing. This year's trends included the vintage look for girls — boots, blazers, and brooches.

Red Sox hats, Livestrong bracelets, and cozy North Face fleeces were everywhere, as were cute and comfortable shoes like moccasins and ballerina flats.

Life-size Leprechaun Augies Shanahan sports his Irish pride on Saint Patrick's day, as he reveals his lucky four-leaf clover tattoo. Going against his father's wishes, Augie got tattooed while on Newton North's Prague Summer trip in 2003. Touch of Pink Samantha Alviani lifts her shirt for the camera to show off her tiny waistline tattoo. Samantha got the tattoo to honor her mother and to advocate the fight against breast cancer. King of Ink Cookie Nicholazzo certainly takes the award for the most tattoos at Newton North. As a Junior, he has already had both biceps and one calf worked on by an artist close to him. Metal Eyeshadow Mary Luran Hall smiles wide, and displays her eyebrow piercing. Her screams from the piercing months earlier are now muffled by her happy artistic expression. Painful Piercings Doug Fleischer gets up close and personal with the camera, showing off his gutsy trigus earring. Ouch! Scandalous Rose Bess Chudnow flips her jeans for a sneak peak at her rose tattoo. The black background gives this rose a little edge. Clowning Around Matt Tocci might have bad boy biceps, but his tattoo shows off a goofy and dramatic side to this sexy facade. Gotta have Faith Khalel Pritchard's crazy cross lets everyone know that this boy has got faith. Converting is not an option for this guy.

From back covering tattoos to metallic lip hoops, Newton North students never hesitate to use their bodies as an open canvas for artistic expression. Whether it's a tiny snowflake on the ankle's crevice, or an erotic rose creeping up the small of the back, girls adore making tattoos sexy and meaningful statements. The males tend, however, not to want a rose or a butterfly sewn into their skin. More often, boys show off their bulging biceps and cut calves with images of ethnic pride or childhood fascinations.

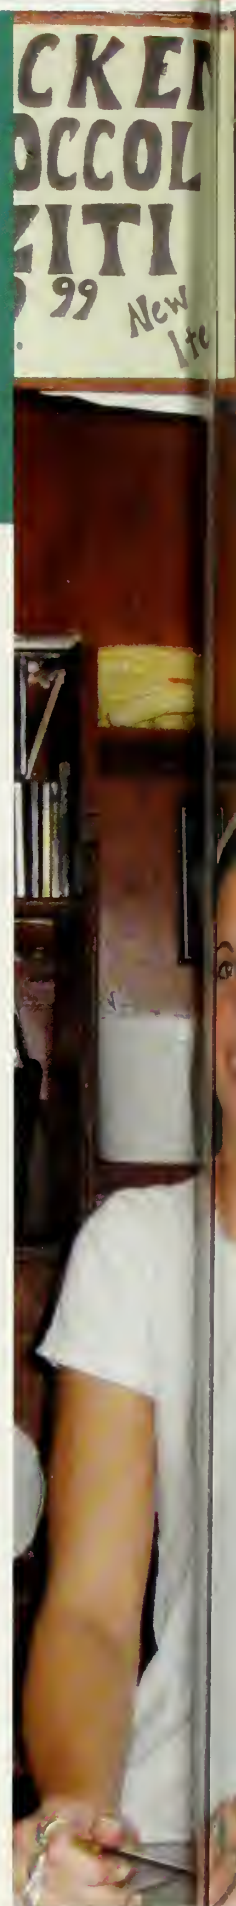

iNking^{Up} or piNNiNg^{Down}

Some students are looking for a more temporary solution, without the permanence of a tattoo. Even simple ear piercing can be taken to the extreme. "Triage's" and the "iNdustrail" are just two ways to get funky with your ears. Face piercing is also very popular. Piercings accentuate graceful noses or arching eyebrows. Believe it or not, you can pierce almost any part of your body - - that is if you can handle extreme pain. So whether it be drastic or mild, flashy or discrete, this body-mutilating trend is here to stay.

Whether it's a homework assignment, a lengthy team practice, or a late night rehearsal, students at Newton North are always busy. So, it comes as a surprise that many students are able to cram a job into their already busy schedules. Some students want a job so that they can earn some extra cash to keep aside for a rainy day. Others just want to learn at a young age about the workplace that they will be a full part of in the future. Some even apply just so that they can clear their head for a few hours from school stress. Whatever the reason are getting jobs, we salute them.

Newton North's life guarding program prepares students with all the qualifications for becoming a life guard, so many decide to pursue this option. Others work in restaurants around Newton where they greet and serve hungry families and friends. Some students (believe it or not) have more obscure jobs like making flower bouquet arrangements at nearby Kabloom, or working a desk job in an Orthodontist's office. No matter what your interests are, there is a job out there for everyone. So, this page is dedicated to all those hard workers at our school who are earning for themselves and experiencing the workplace first hand.

As boys wake up from their afternoon naps, they push aside their schoolwork and satisfy their rumbling stomachs. Indulging in pizza and buffalo wings, they start to meet up with their friends. The guys then entertain themselves by goofing around, watching sports, or playing video games, especially Halo or Halo 2.

Party time Like we said before, senior guys know what to do when they get tired of video games, especially seniors Doug Fleischer, Augie Shanahan, Boris Stavitsky, and Ben White.

10 p.m.

As plans are made, the guys either go to a movie, hang out with their girlfriends at a friend's house, or head out for a party. Sleep is no option and it's never too late for video games or a late drive.

what's that?

HE Does

In the early evening, many girls are either getting some home work done, about to hop into the shower, or coming back from an afternoon shopping trip. Once the girls are done getting ready, they start to meet up with their friends and go out for a quick bite to eat.

In the heart of the night girls are walking the streets of Boston, going to see late movies, hanging out at a friend's house, or arriving at a party. Things never seem to work out like they're planned to however, and most of the time, it's the guys' fault.

10 p.m.

After a stressful week in school everyone looks forward to their weekends. Guys and girls meet up and together they plan their evening activities. As the night progresses, the predictable phone calls of "what's up?" and "What are you doing tonight?" are exchanged. While guys transform into couch potatoes and watch sports or play video games, girls get dressed together for an exciting night out on the town in Boston or get ready to gather at a party.

Top Five... things I learned by senior year

- 1 Skipping homeroom WILL get you detention (That is if you get caught)
- 2 Don't fail gym, no one wants to do make-ups
- 3 Don't leave projects, papers, homework, etc... for the last minute, something always comes up
- 4 Where the best water fountains and bathrooms are
- 5 Not to stress so much about school and leave time to spend with the people you'll miss next year

Top Five... things I haven't learned by senior year

- 6 Not to get caught skipping homeroom
- 7 Know how to get around the first floor
- 8 To clean up after ourselves
- 9 Where my REAL locker is

To be, or not to be...

iNtrospection

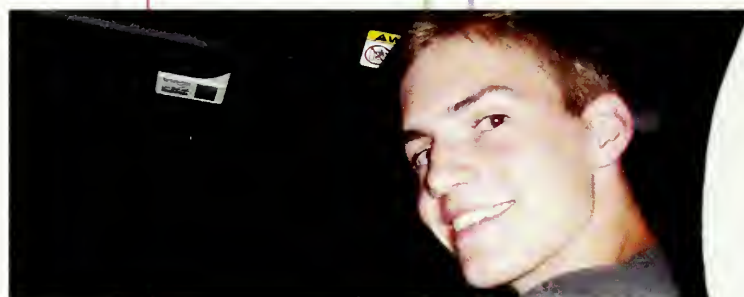

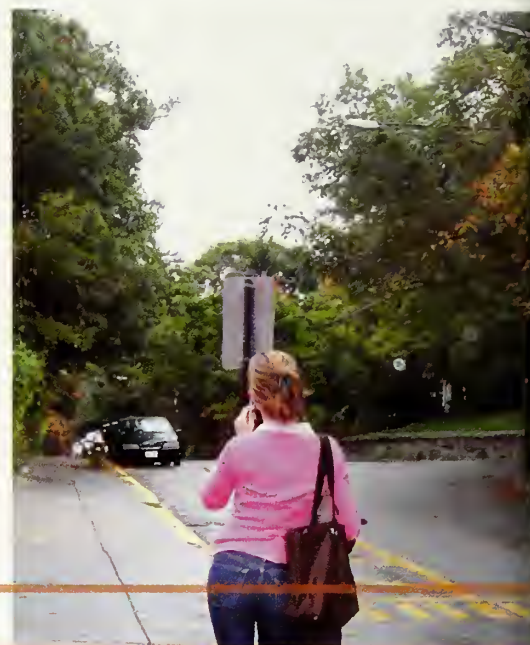

The four years spent in high school are among the most important of people's lives. North's students are no exception. Each year spent at North is challenging. Freshman year there's the excitement and anxiety of the first year in a new school, sophomores deal with MCAS, juniors with their thesis, and seniors deal with the stress of applying to college. You learn a lot along the way and somewhere between all the mounds of homework and hours of extra-curriculars, you find time for relaxation. Freshmen cruise, sophomore sleepover, junior and senior proms are just a few of the entertaining traditions that North provides for its students.

Rain or Shine. Becca Kahane sets out for her car on a gloomy afternoon. If only she had Dorothy's slippers and could just click her heels three times.

Living Large: Senior Matt Westman is all smiles riding shotgun in a friend's convertible. I wonder if Matt would still be in a good mood if he had to find parking every day.

A Smile on your Face Makes the World a Better Place?: Maybe this is true, but unfortunately for Mia Schon her bright smile is not going to make her parking tickets disappear. Mia's charms cannot overcome her trouble parking on Dexter, though she gets points for keeping up the positive attitude.

This year the elimination of senior parking in the third lot has caused an uproar among students. Senior lot, originally a coveted privilege for the eldest class, is this year's most controversial issue. The reason for this change is to create more spots for the faculty, but many seniors who as underclassmen looked forward to third lot see this as unfair and unnecessary. Now seniors must continue to be early risers if they want to "catch the worm" or in this case catch a good spot on Hull Street or "the Strip". And what happens to the unlucky ones who miss out on these select legal places? It's either miles of walking or parking illegally and getting tickets, or worse towed. So now spoiled seniors are beginning to identify with their parents' horror stories of the long treks to school in bad conditions. But hey, at least now we will have something to complain about to our kids...

When I was your age...

Leader of the Pack: Aidan O'Donnovan leads Drew Vello, Steve Hazeltine and Andrew Meltzer to his car for a free. The boys have to hurry if they are going to make it back in time for their next class.

Do Seniors really grow up?

Match the freshmen backpack with the student.

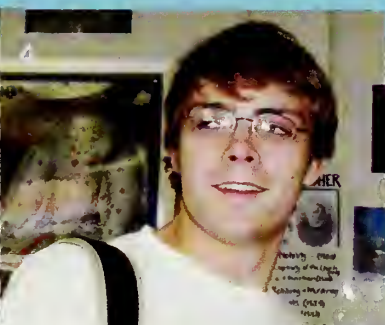

The Wall of Shame: Jessica Marks tries to hide against the Riley wall in embarrassment over her massive bag. With that kind of bag, no wonder everyone calls her Mary Poppins.

Chip on your Shoulder: Somehow Rion Vaughn still has a grin despite the weight of a rather large backpack. Maybe Rion should spend a little less time smiling and little more time visiting his locker.

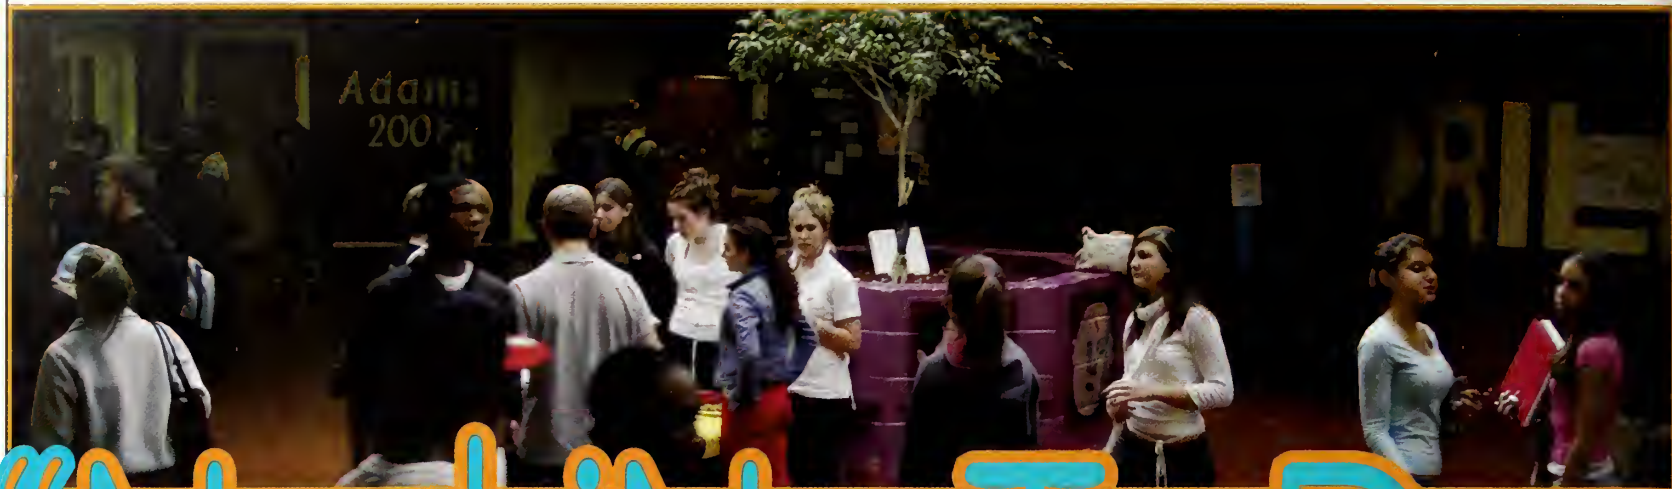

Locker Much?: Becca Ain claims to have outgrown her freshmen bag. We'll let you be the judge of that. At least she manages to coordinate her bag with her vibrant hair and persona.

Model Behavior: Andrew Stevenson may look suave in his model pose...until you see what he looks like from behind. However, with its double compartments and water bottle pouch I can see why Andrew chooses function over fashion.

Places To Go

If you are a senior or a junior, you might find that you have tons of free time and NO WHERE to go. Maybe it's because we no longer have access to back halls and Main Street is always closed. Don't rely on getting your work done in the library because it's too crowded and loud! Whatever happened to "twelve inch voices"? Anyway, if you are looking for a way to pass the time, we've got some suggestions for you. From homework to video games, taking a nap, or going for a run, Newton North students always manage to do something interesting during frees. Or you might be like senior Jared Delaney Smith who doesn't have any frees and is a "crazy overachiever." We suggest the former!

sugar spice and everything nice

The joys of food! During the summer, NNHS students ate when they wanted, what they wanted, with whom ever they wanted. Now, with school back in session, freedom no longer exists. Lunch is scheduled into the day. A menu is read over the loud speaker- "Today's Specials Are.."

This is what lunch has come down to.

"How much money should I bring for lunch?" asked Bobby. "Where should I go?" cried Emma.

These are the types of questions which students are forced to ponder every morning before class.

Students realize however, as the years pass by, that there is CHOICE. Decisions can be made.

Lunch can be enjoyed. Life's small pleasures are available within the dark, brick cafeteria walls.

Freshmen year, Bobby brought his mom's homemade sandwiches. Four years later, Anna's Taquerilla is his daily source of food. Emma's freshman year consisted of the cafeteria's cold pizza and a bag of pretzels. Four years later, she has moved onto the cafeteria's freshly-made veggie wraps.

Whether you bring lunch from home, buy lunch at school, or venture out to your favorite take-out for a quick bite, students at North have discovered the wide range of options that do exist.

With graduation around the corner, Bobby and Emma now realize,

"Oh, the Possibilities..."

Kentucky Fried Chicken Freshman Joel Ortiz enjoys a few pieces of cafeteria fried chicken and fries while talking and smiling with his friends on October 13. After School Lunch Jam On October 13, seniors Lizzie Fulton and Mark Harrold enjoy a quick bite to eat after school while in deep conversation with each other.

Is it OPPORTUNITY FOUND

Just ask anyone around school: the best way to make the most out of North is by joining a club. It is a great experience that exposes you to many new, fun things. From Animal Rights to Stage Crew, there is a club for everyone. If you want to join a club, just put your name down on the sheet at Club Day! On September 27th, 2004 over 60 of the clubs at North set up their tables in the cafeteria to encourage more people to join them. This day is especially helpful to the freshmen, who joined the school less than a month ago and want to get involved. For freshmen, Club Day can be a little overwhelming at first, but they quickly get into it and sign up for all sorts of clubs. Said freshman Anya DubbleOlsen, "Club Day is really fun and helpful."

Even if you're not a freshman, Club Day can also be valuable and enjoyable to attend. Can't find a club you're interested in? Start your own! Junior Sabrina Lunin, co-officer of the Dance Club, said, "starting your own club is difficult, but in the end it's satisfying."

After signing up for the clubs, most students receive an email invitation to meetings when they are scheduled. Some clubs like MVP and the GayStraight Alliance host special days throughout the year. The days include assemblies which contribute to promoting their club. Many clubs support important causes, like finding a cure for cancer and AIDS orphans. Clubs like Hispanoles and the Asian Culture Club expose you to other fascinating cultures. Others like ping pong and juggling are just for pure enjoyment.

Anyone who attends Club Day is likely to notice the loads of smiling faces across the room. Club Day is a pleasurable, helpful, and motivating event that brings students together to search out exciting new opportunities. Most importantly, Club Day is one of the key ways to get involved in the scene of outstanding extra-curricular activities here at Newton North High School.

"Who do you want to be today?" little Sammy Jr. asked. That is precisely the point. Halloween is the one day of the year when you can truly BE who you want to be. You can morph into your favorite action hero. You can travel back in time to dress your favorite diva. You can even lie on the floor and fake dead (like your favorite puppy dog). Glancing down Main Street on Halloween gives students and staff alike the chance to SEE what people are really like iNside..beyond the normal everyday wardrobe, the appearance that we assume just to fit it. Halloween is the day to STAND out and let all inhibitions go. Who are you going to be next year? Maybe another Red Sox player when we win the World Series again. Perhaps a new character from the latest Scary Movie. Be creative. Halloween is NOT the time to BLEND iN.

It's the one day of the year when NO ONE can judge you by the color of your stripes.

Frankster Pimps Sophomores Igor Groysman, Angie O'David, and Avery Mitchell chat about who's pimp/pimpette costume is the best. They had arranged to dress in themed costumes with their friends. Pooh Power Senior Emmy Micklitsch lies on Main Street during third lunch. She was proud to present her Winnie The Pooh body-suit. Arrrgg Matey Junior Sasha Greenberg points to land ahead. Dembe displayed her costume as mysterious with a mask to cover most of her face. Hands up! Senior Paul Jones arrests Junior Mary Luran Hall and Senior Phil Goldwater as a friendly gesture. Jones was dressed as a realistic looking cop while Hall was Minnie Mouse. Watch out! Seniors Becca Kahane and Britt Spackman hang out after class for a quick yearbook photo. Kahane was dressed as a go go dancer and Spackman was a black grasshopper.

Brotherly love Seniors Mark Dargon, Nick Pheifer, and Jesse Davis lean against Riley house tree. They were dressed for Class Spirit day. Glamor girls Seniors Hana Dembe, Becca Auerbach, and Jessica Marks pose in purple. They showed their senior pride all day with their class shirts. Lookin good Seniors Lena Andrews and Saba Nejatian shine their smiles out on Main Street. They dressed in formal wear on Tuesday. Spirit blues Seniors Angelamaria Visconti, Sophiya Penek, Britt Spackman, Ali Holdway, and Alyssa Davis pose for a picture. They were hanging around blue on Class Spirit day.

Spirit Week can be described as one long crazy day that's split into three actual days. Three days of iNsane outfits that you would never wear in school outside of Spirit Week. Leading up to Thanksgiving Vacation, students are encouraged to wear what is assigned for the day. Pajamas. Formal wear. Class T's. At the finale of the third day, a Wednesday half-day, there is usually a well anticipated Pep Rally. However, this year the festive activities were cancelled due to previous unacceptable behavior displayed by some students before, during, and after Power Puff. The destructive activities during Powder Puff did downplay the participation of many students in Spirit Week. Those who did participate were highly enthusiastic and proud to show off Newton North Spirit however. Many students say the best part about Spirit Week is not having to get dressed on Monday morning and, on Tuesday, being given the opportunity to show of your formal wear. Class T-shirts are sold throughout the week for those who wish to wear them on Wednesday. One day of laziness, one of pampering, and one of spirit: Three days of ultimate craziness!

Spread the Spirit of Winter

One of Newton North's long standing traditions is the annual Powder Puff football game. Each year dozens of Junior girls play an intense flag football game against the senior girls. Anyone can sign up to play, the only requirement is you must be an enthusiastic team player who wants to experience what life is like on North's football field. Flag football is similar to real football but instead of tackling to end a play, a flag must be pulled off of a girl's waist. Several practices are held before the big game for both the juniors and seniors. Some say the best part is the class spirit that the girls flaunt throughout the Friday before Saturday's big game. The seniors design a T-shirt with a slogan stating their approach to beating the juniors, and juniors typically make their shirt at a party prior to the game. Although the field was wet from rain on game day, the girls laid it all on the line. The game was intense. It seemed that the Juniors were sure to win, but the Seniors caught up quickly. However, an unfortunate disruption from outside the stadium led to a cancellation of the game. The score then remained a tie.

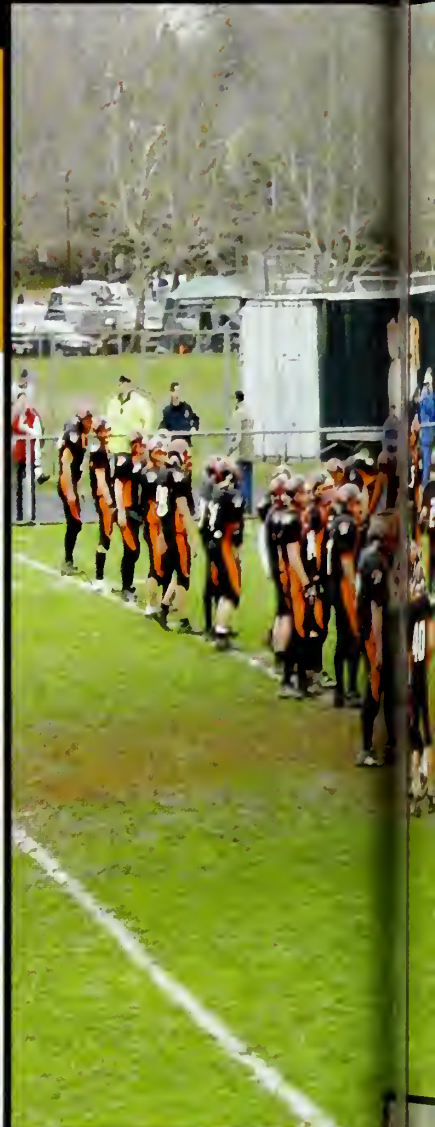

Powder Puff Swap Junior and senior girls, needing to keep their energy up for the game, subed-in for each other between each play. Bright Smiles Juniors Lori Cassorla and Emily Giddes cheer their friend on at the game. They were excited to show their '06 spirit.

The Thanksgiving Day Football Game is always the year's most awaited rivalry. The tradition of the Brookline Football team against North's Tigers is an intense event. Each year the game is either at Brookline or North's football field. This year the game was at Newton North High School. The crumbling stadium was filled to capacity with enthusiastic fans. The fans consisted of students, graduates, alumni, parents, relatives, friends, and babies dressed in a tiger costumes. The Tigers made a roaring entrance onto the field. Before the game, Tigers stretched and cheered to pump up the energy and get the spirit going. Once the game began it was certain that this was North's time to shine. North's Tigers won a victory of 41 to 13. Cheering alongside the field was the squad of elated and talented cheerleaders. Even the band played traditional football game songs that encouraged cheering among the crowd. Although the field was slippery from incessant rain, the Tigers were able to hold on to their lead. The victory of the Thanksgiving game was truly something to be thankful for.

Go Tigers! A group of cheerleaders cheering on the Tigers. They helped with the enthusiasm of the crowd throughout the Thanksgiving game. Pass it A quick pass being made between Tiger Football players. They succeeded in making a touchdown with this play.

Tiger Fans Enthusiastic football fans watching the game. Their spirits didn't dampen because of the rainy weather. Tackle A football play in action. Newton North's defensive linemen stopped the Brookline running back. Line up Junior Matt Manopoli lines up for a down. Quick Pass Quarterback Junior Khalel Pritchard passes to a wide receiver. The pass was completed and the Tigers got a first down. Stretch Out The Tigers are warming up for the game. They did stretches and push-ups to warm up their muscles. Helping Hand Senior Joey Leung finishes a play. Leung helped up number one from the Brookline team with courtesy and respect.

The first class (entitled Leadership 2000) had one teacher and forty students. The class would also serve as a bridge between the administration and the student population. As that pilot year went on, it became clear that more than one teacher was needed to address these serious social issues. The decision was then made for the class to be taught by two teachers. This pair should be different in terms of race, gender, and age. In addition to discussing social issues, the class was formed under the auspices of the principal to give back to the school and larger community. As a result, the class (now entitled Leadership in a Diverse Society) represents, as best we can, a cross-section of the school based on staff recommendations as well as recommendations from current Leadership students. The class examines different modes of leadership with a concentration on social issues. It is a class that expects much from its students, particularly a willingness to push their thinking and experience to places they may not have been willing to go as well as having an impact on the school as a whole. - Peter Goddard and Inez Dover

Leadership students spend time together on the retreat in order to learn about leadership and each other.

Taking the iNitiative

When it all began...

The idea for the Leadership in a Diverse Society class began first as a retreat. During the 1980's and 1990's, there were racial incidents that necessitated a response from the school. The principal, Dr. Marini, and a group of teachers thought of ways to be more proactive in preventing these incidents from happening again. As a result, the school took diverse groups of students to two-day retreats on Thompson Island to figure out ways to address many of the inequalities that students and adults perceived. These retreats went on for some time, but students were frustrated that the spirit of these retreats had little or no staying power. The decision was then made to expand the amount of students to include all kinds of diversity (i.e. curriculum levels, ethnicities, gender, interests, sexual orientations, socioeconomic class) and make the group a class. -Peter Goddard and Inez Dover

DanciNg iN the RaiN

We thought it would never happen. The impossible. A curse that would haunt generation after generation until good old Babe decided to set us free. Bostonians understood what it meant to suffer. We suffered. And suffered. And suffered. We cried. We cheered. We wept. We prayed. We laughed. We covered our eyes. Would we ever be free? Free from torture? Season-in, Season-out, the answer was repeatedly, "No." But then, 2004 arrived. It made us suffer. It made us cry, cheer, weep, pray, laugh, and cover our eyes. We watched the demise of our playoff possibility as the team lost, and lost, and lost. Day in and day out we lost. Hitting was no more. Winning was in the past.

But then, August arrived. It made us hopeful again. We stared, we prayed, we partied, and we enjoyed. We enjoying winning, and nothing else.

But then September rolled around. We lost again. We lost. And lost. And lost. And we watched the Yankees win and win and win. They cheered. They laughed. And they enjoyed.

But then came the big finale. The race to the finish. The Yankees in the lead...the Wild Card spot still to be decided. It had to be us, right?

We finished the season in second place, behind the pinstripes, waiting to get our little hands on the bats, ready to swing with all our might, ready to defy all "laws of baseball," ready to win.

Before we knew it we had swept the Angles, taken the Yankees to an unexpected (I mean very unexpected) game seven, and had won the ALCS. We were one series away. One team stood between our trophy and breaking the 86 year old curse. Could we do it? Could the Sox win? What would happen to the fans? Would Boston survive the celebration? All these questions lingered in midair, drifting in all directions, a little to the "yes-side," a little to the "no-side."

But then on October 27th the heavens opened up and the gods set us free. We won the WORLD SERIES. We cried (this time out of happiness), we laughed, we kissed, we hugged our grandparents, we called our relatives in New York and screamed into the receiver, "Who's your Daddy now?"

We prepared for the celebrations downtown. We watched our beloved heroes address the entire Sports nation and felt proud to be part of the winning team. We felt proud to be from Boston—the lights of Fenway shining down on all of us to see. No one could take it away from us. We were finally the best. Saturday October 30th the team returned home from Disney World and boarded the duck boats to storm down the streets of Boston. The city prepared for the festivities. Fans lined the streets of Boston from Fenway Park down to the Charles River, and huddled in blankets with umbrellas along side ready to fight the rain, cheers broke out and the wave made its way up and down Boylston Street.

The city had come together and before we knew it was Dancing and Singing in the Rain.

an iNtegral system

The epicenter of the school; the eye of the storm; the calm in the middle of the chaos. The Main Office and the Data Center are all of these and more, working daily to coordinate our complex system of faculty and students into a comprehensive whole. From running the school's budget to melding together the various house offices, the Main Office is present in nearly all aspects of our academic and extra-curricular lives. Keeping faculty and student schedules in order, and tweaking the class sizes to fit the student population is a daily occurrence for the Data Center. With Principal Jennifer Huntington and Assistant Principal Gary Stollar leading the way, the Main Office works to ensure that everyone involved at North has a smooth and safe experience. The Main Office and Data Center work hard to integrate our diverse school into one, iNtegral system.

Dear Class of 2005,

In the fall of 2001 I asked the members of the entering class of 2005 to think about the legacy you want to leave behind once you left Newton North High School. When faculty, staff, and underclassmen think of you, what will come to mind? Now, four years later, I have a pretty good idea of what they will say.

First, and most importantly, the Class of 2005 will be remembered as one of the most selfless classes in recent memory. Your volunteer activities ranging from fundraising for Food For People to organizing Student Action Teams to help clean-up Mainstreet are evidences of putting others before yourselves.

Second, the Class of 2005 will be remembered for its high academic achievement. The range of your intellectual pursuits and accomplishments in school and out of school is astounding. From Model UN to ballet to performing with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, your talents have astounded and brought pleasure to many people.

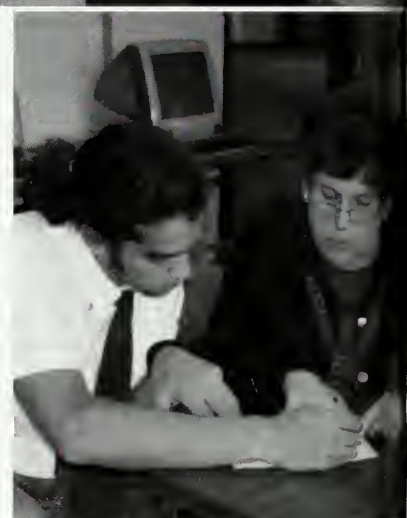

Finally, the class of 2005 will be remembered for its sheer zest for living. You studied hard and you played hard. You enjoyed life to the fullest by engaging in it and taking your education beyond these four walls.

No matter where you find yourselves next year I hope that certain characteristics that have defined you collectively here at North will not only endure but flourish new ways. Be a positive influence on the community you are in, take intellectual risks, and remember that each of you has been blessed with advantages and opportunities denied to others, so don't squander them.

The class of 2005 will always be special to me. You are my first class that I have had the privilege of staying with throughout your high school career. And it has been a privilege. Thank You

Historical evidence

At Newton North High School, one of our core values is academic excellence. In the History department, students embark on an intensive journey down the road to success. In this department, students have the rare ability to apply and improve upon their knowledge of historical facts, essay writing, and deciphering old counts of historical instances. The first two years of history offer world courses focusing on the general happenings of a particular era. Junior and senior years offer more choices that are focused on a particular area of their interest. By requiring both a World and American History course, students gain a broader knowledge of other countries as well as strengthening what they know about United States history.

Junior year, said to be the most difficult year for students both academically as well as with the amount of extra curricular activities available, is also the year that the junior thesis is required. A research project for the American History class, students spend the majority of the year researching, gathering information, researching, organizing facts, and writing the paper itself. "It is very important to choose a topic that you find interesting or else it can be the worst three months of your life," says junior Ely Goldberg. "The intensity and pressure of the thesis is somewhat overwhelming at times, so it's really important to stay focused."

Once the tumult of the junior year is over, the end is near. History is not a required course for seniors, but many take it anyway. "I took Africa and the New World because I never learned about African history before in depth. And I really wanted to take advantage of the opportunities available to me," said senior Becky Fogel. Most students who take the specialized classes, such as Africa and the New World, are genuinely interested in what they choose. The knowledge that they acquire will be useful to them for years to come., especially if they choose to go into that field.

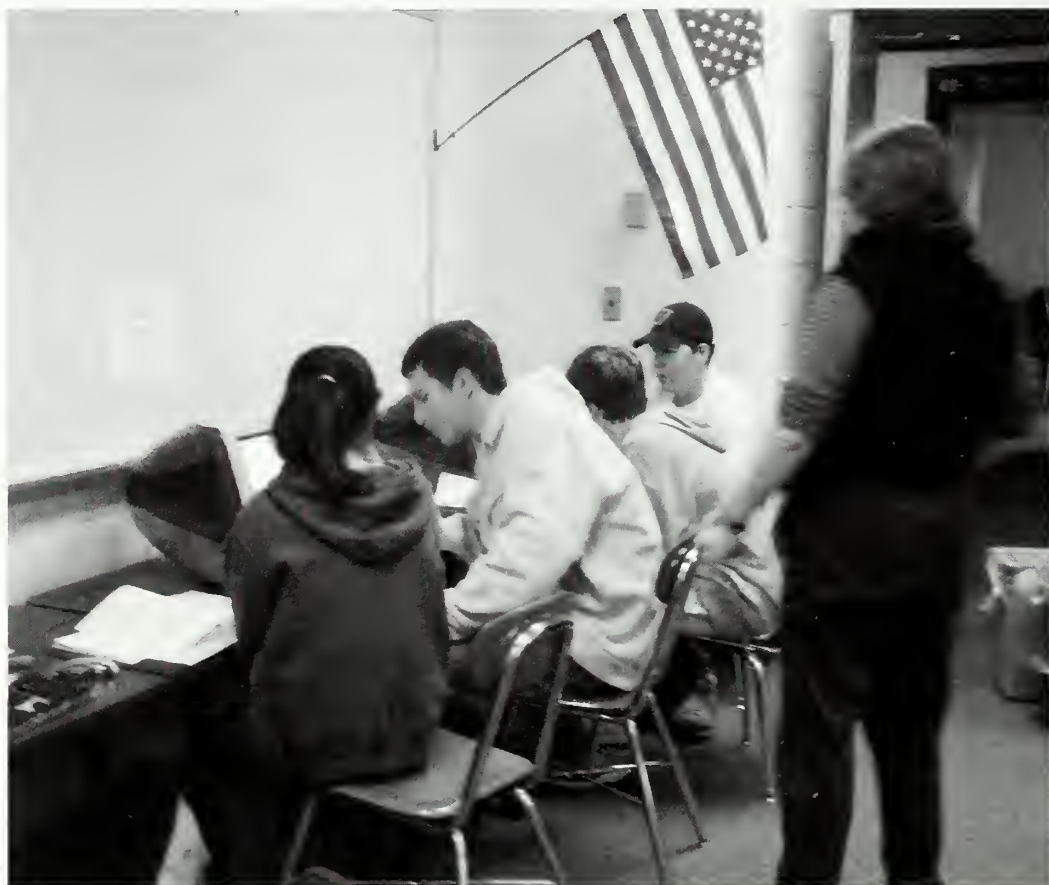

Wall Street, here we come! History teacher Elizabeth Sharlack looks in on a group activity during an E-block economics class. Seniors John Maclean, Steve Hazeltine, and Seena Nejatian discussed discrimination and prejudice in advertisement during an economics class. A long long time ago in the land of... In this U.S. History class, Dan Kutnitz lectures to his students. Juniors, after two years of world history, must go back to look at the changing times from an American perspective. Take affirmative actions! In a senior economics class, Kimberly O'David and Austin Cannon participate in the in-depth discussion regarding discrimination against African-Americans. Time for a test! Freshman Katerina Vasiliu and Laura Gianopoulos pay close attention to their history test on Africa.

The math department at Newton North has the difficult job of trying to incorporate students from varieties of backgrounds and learning experiences into their program. To achieve this, they have separated the subject into different course levels to accommodate their students' particular needs or interests. They also use an integrated teaching system which combines many different branches of mathematics into one course. For instance, rather than taking geometry and algebra in two different years, students learn both throughout the two years, making the course less specialized and more inclusive. They also offer more specialized courses, for students with different learning styles or who are interested in a particular subject. The math department has also organized the Math Lab, a place where students can receive additional help during their free time. All of these changes from a more conservative system require continual adjustment and growth as the department looks for ways to further improve. It is this commitment to excellence and determination that nothing else will do that separates Newton North from other schools. The math department has used diverse methods to reach a diverse student body in order to achieve their ultimate goal: effectively teaching math.

Hypothesis:

Students who take physics and bio, while earning the correct amount of credits, will be allowed to graduate. However, most students take more than the required two. These students, who take the extra classes, want to learn more about the specific science, and receive extra credit.

Materials:

2 beakers, 1 periodic table, 1 Bunsen burner, matches, triple-beam balance, 5 thermometers, 1 pair of goggles, 1 notebook, pen and/or pencil, dissecting needle, 1 graduated cylinder, 6 test tubes, pH⁺ paper, microscope, 2 slides, and chemicals (properly noted). Don't forget the teacher and students!

Procedure:

Take one part frosh physics, two parts honors bio, one part chem, three parts meteorology, two parts anatomy, one part astronomy, and two parts field studies. After the experiment has been started, record the data, and let simmer for four years.

Conclusion:

Students who pass the required science courses will get enough science credits to graduate. Students who want to participate in the extra science courses offered, want to learn more about the specific science, and receive extra credit.

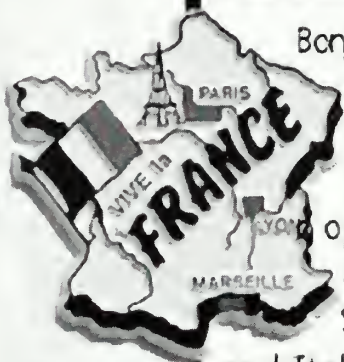

Pre-heat at 345... Seniors Jill Mann and Lauren Notarotomaso dice up their newest experiment in human physiology and anatomy class. Next up is the marinating phase... Penny for your thoughts Juniors Rebecca Stahl and Jill Lidsky jot down their notes for the experiment at hand. Two parts ammonium and what else? sulfur dioxide? This could get interesting... Weighing you interests Seniors Mike Langone, Evan Morse, and Ben Bancroft have fun with the triple beam balance. Totally Tubular! Seniors Katie O'Gara and Ahmad Maksoud take care of creating a solution with the correct amount of compounds in it for a computer lab. Soon after, they must connect the electrodes to the liquids in hopes of getting a reaction. Microscopic Evidence Senior Nick Calamare examines a specimen through the 10x power microscope. Maybe he'll discover the cure for cancer!

iN preparation for the future

Throw together one part birdhouse, two parts carburetor, and one part chocolate souffle. Shake well, refrigerate overnight. These are the key ingredients to the Career and Tech Ed. Department and programs at Newton North. The all iNclusive program allows students to focus mainly on their specific career interests. Whether you want to get a head start on college courses or want to be prepared for the real world right out of high school, Career and Tech Ed. is for you. The program sets your schedule around your specific point of interest. "I have twelve periods a week of Culinary Arts, and I also take Theater and Law," said Christina Casavant, "It's really helpful and fun to focus on culinary." However, Career and Tech Ed. does not limit you, Christina is also interested in crime scene investigation, and the police force, "I take a class after school a few days a week. It's outside of school, but my course load is manageable so it's okay."

Culinary arts is not the only department in the Career and Technical Education. The others include Electrical, Graphic Arts, Cosmetology, and Technology and Engineering. Electrical focuses on honing skills related to the electrical field. Students learn based on real life experiences and can apply what they learn at home. Many electrical majors go on to become professional electricians. Graphic Arts is the study of design on the computer. Students learn the basic skills needed to create a simple design for a product. For example, students have made CD covers, bottle covers, and posters. The Graphic Arts room, located on the first floor are also where teacher can get multiple copies made for classes. Cosmetology is a Career and Tech Ed. course that meets outside of school. Everyday, the students who are in the Cosmetology classes leave school about noon, and travel by bus to the local Blaine Beauty School. Students need to be at least sixteen to take the course and need a total of one thousand hours to get a certificate of completion. Soon-to-be Engineers participate in the Technology and Engineering courses and begin their training for college or for a real-world job.

Many students also transfer into Newton North from schools such as Newton South, like Jennifer D'Angelo. "I was thinking about dropping culinary, and then I found out about the Career and Tech. Ed. courses here. After a lot of paperwork, I was able to switch into North, and I'm glad I did."

Once the hours required are finished, students receive a certificate of completion in their major. "It's a lot like a sort of pre-college," says Casavant. This certificate allows students to go straight into the work force if they choose or have the upper advantage when they get to college. "I feel like now that I have taken all of these courses, I'll be better prepared for going to a culinary school."

Offset by .5 Fred Therrien's Architectural Drafting class focuses on recreating blueprints as a final project. Precision handling Junior Alice Duket works on the outer walls of her house. I came, I saw, I conquered A Carpentry major, junior Greg Cooperman, saws a piece of plywood for a project. MixiN it up! Senior Christina Casavant and junior Jen D'Angelo begin to make a cake. Soon enough, there will be chocolate cake for everyone!

familial instincts

8:45 am: Picked up baby from Room 378 (Child Development Study).

9:00 am: Baby started crying in English class; teacher not happy.

9:25 am: Baby finally stopped.

Child Development Study is an exciting yet educational course offered for all students at Newton North High School. Not only do students learn about the development of a child through movies, textbooks, and projects. Students are also given an opportunity to experience childcare firsthand.

2:55 pm: Baby started crying at a friend's house.

3:20 pm: Baby stopped crying after a 25-minute bottle feeding. Hand hurts. Badly.

When starting off the year, each high schooler is given a list of names of all the preschool children in attendance. At the beginning, it seems like just a list of blank names on a piece of paper. Throughout the experience, the names on the list become more real. One of the most intriguing aspects of the class includes playing with the children whose names appeared on the list that very first day.

4:15 pm: Younger sister dressed up baby while I was doing my homework.

The observation lab is a primary part of the study. In the lab, there is a one-way mirror that allows you to see the preschoolers without them knowing that they are under observation. This helps high school students and preschool teachers to learn about the actions of the children without outside distractions. Along with visual observations, you also have the ability to listen to the children through a sound carrier.

8:30 pm: Baby started crying. Again.

8:40 pm: Baby stopped crying after diaper change.

The most significant project throughout the year revolves around taking home a simulation of an infant. These baby dolls are designed to act like five to eight month old babies, and record the caretaker's nurturing, or, in some cases, neglect. Some babies cry at a minimal amount, and some cry for hours at a time depending on how they were programmed. The person taking care of the baby is required to record their experiences throughout the day.

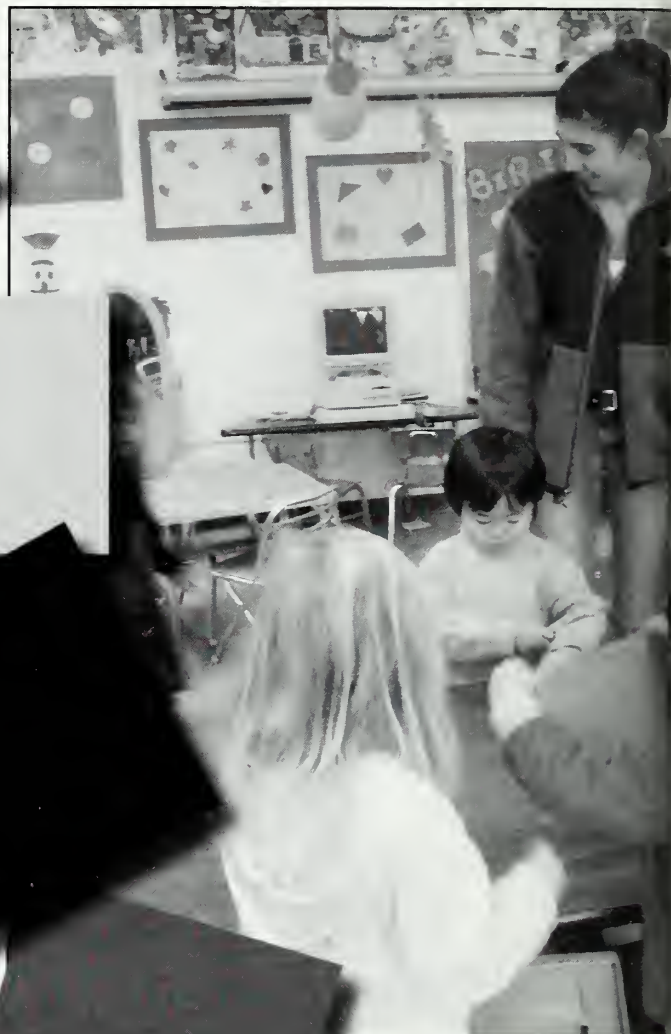

1:45 am: Woke up to screaming baby.

2:25 am: End of tantrum. Yay.

This course offers a variety of learning options, which are mostly hands-on activities. Students at Newton North High School are privileged enough to have a preschool as part of their learning experience. Child Development study is an exceptional break from the normal school day.

6:35 am: Started crying while I was getting ready for school.

7:30 am: Returned baby after longest day ever.

Checks and Balances Junior John Schindler and sophomore Ivanna Pena use the computers to organize their finances. Students created their own small businesses and learned how to run them effectively.

Wall Street, here we come! Mr. Kane looks on as his students work on their projects in his small business class. Students focused on balancing the budget of their businesses.

iNvest iN BusiNess Courses

The Business Technology and Education Department offers a variety of courses, some of which can lead to certificates of competence. Some of these certificates include office administration, legal studies, and fashion design and merchandising. The majority of the business courses provide a computer component, allowing students to meet the "hands-on" requirements for the electives that you take. Many students have an interest in majoring in business in college and want to get a head start. Others would like to see if they may be interested in business. Mrs. Ostrer, the department head and teacher in the department, states that "it is better to find out your interest in high school than in college when you have already spent a great deal of money and decide you do not enjoy what you are pursuing." Will Heidlage, a freshman in Interactive Multimedia with Mr. Murphy said that in class, "We learn how to create movies and programs with animations." Freshman, Kelly MacCormick Hard at Work Sophomores Grant Battle and Ephie Herskovitz stare intently at their computer screens during their small business class. They use their computers to organize and budget their businesses.

Type, type, type as fast as you can... Junior Dan Wieder of Mr. Kane's F-block small business class uses his time wisely, refiguring his business's accounts and formulating a plan for future profit.

I want to be an astronaut! Junior Dan Rooney, in the business math course, flips through his textbook while his teacher, department head Susan Ostrer looks on.

who took half-year word processing course with Ms. Novinsky said that, "I am now able to type more, and I am a little faster." Like Mr. Murphy and Ms. Novinsky, the teachers in the department are active in other things. For example, Ms. Novinsky is the yearbook advisor, and Mr. Murphy is the computer department head. Newton North High School offers a vast variety of courses which can help students prepare for their lives outside of high school and college. Accounting I enables students to receive a background for business including investment, personal checking accounts, and income taxes. These skills are both useful in every day adult life as well as in the business world. Students in the business courses are responsible for Newton North High School's profitable school store, Tiger Pride. The profits made from the store go towards scholarships for students who take business courses.

Watch out Mr. Trump! Junior Wilson Lee, works on a math problem with an aide, Ms. Whidden in his business course.

Picture Perfect Counselor Mary-lou Petkewich sits at her computer with a huge smile on her face, always ready for her students (and a picture). No time to stop Counselor Michelle Kennedy takes a call with a parent to confirm a schedule change. Ready to listen Counselor Tom Sheehan, like Mrs. Petkewich, is always ready for his students and finds time to listen to any problems they may be having. Multi-task Counselor Darby Verre, juggling the Guidance Aid program, her students, (as well as requests for pictures) always manages to keep a smile on her face. I'm late, I'm late, for a very important date!! Larry Allen, long-time counselor at North, stops quickly in the hallway before a meeting for the picture. Click n' Go Preparing and organizing students schedules is second nature to Kristen Santos. She clicks a few buttons and then-Voila!-you have your schedule!

The Guidance department in Newton North High School is an influential part of every student's life throughout their four years. Unlike previous years in middle school, students develop a relationship with their counselors. As freshmen, students begin their year with guidance seminars which include detailed maps of the school and creative relationship analysis between you, your family, and your friends. At first, students require simple advice from their guidance counselors such as "Where is the career center?" or "Can I skip study hall?" However, later on, students acquire additional advice which assists them in organizing their future. It has been said that students who form strong bonds with their counselors are more successful in high school and in life. Having a guidance counselor can be useful when planning schedules, resolving issues, and preparing for post-school activities. Guidance counselors are always willing to work with their students, welcoming them and making them feel at home.

a different tone to learn to...

Newton North High School has always been one of the best schools in the area for Deaf and Hard of Hearing students. The program here is well known because of its diversity, style of teaching, and intergration into mainstream classes. The EDCO faculty and staff are highly educated, and form strong relationships with the students that they work with on a daily basis.

Many students come in to Newton everyday from as close as Boston, to as far away as Sandwich, just for the quality of the EDCO program at Newton North.

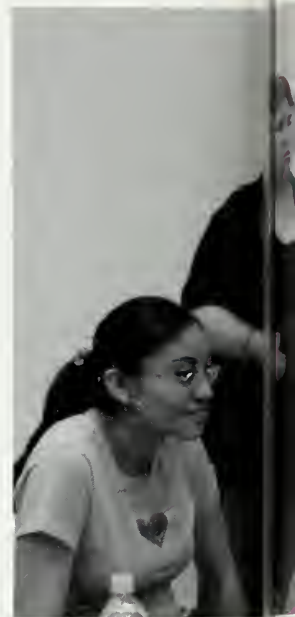

Students also come in to Newton for Middle School, and form even stronger bonds with the surrounding community and their peers. Most students have been in one or more classes with an EDCO student throughout their middle school and high school careers.

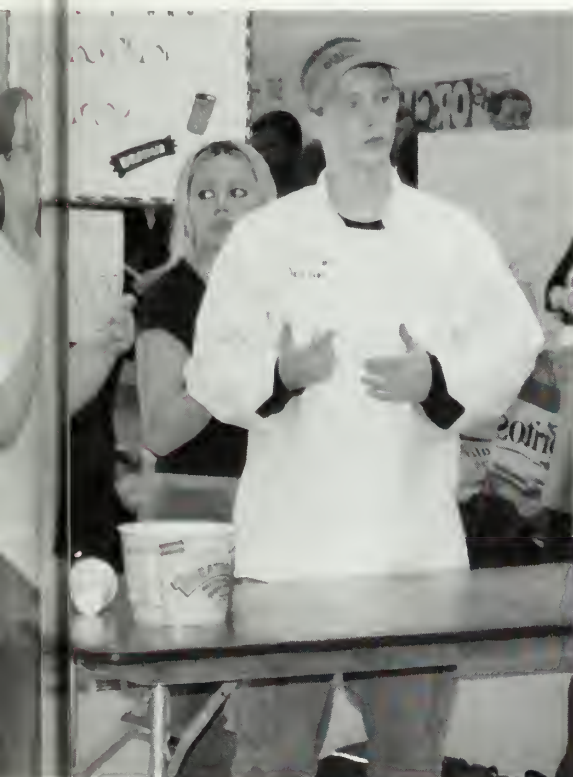

Every year, the EDCO program holds a day during school to involve other students and educate people about deaf and hard of hearing people.

There are speeches made in both A.S.L. (American Sign Language) as well as spoken English, and classes come to presentations in Lasker and the Little Theater. Much like To Be Glad Day, the EDCO students speak from their hearts about what it is like to be deaf or hard of hearing. The speeches were mostly about what it was like to be Deaf in a predominantly hearing world, why they chose to come to Newton North, the different technologies used for hearing aids, sign language difficulties, and other forms of communication.

The EDCO program brings diversity to North, and allows students who are not deaf to be more exposed to things such as sign language, and communication skills, making Newton North an even more diversified school environment.

These ASL EDCO students Reina Leal, Krissy Flanders, Dana Dicastro, and Liya Tadesse teach others the basic signs for restaurant. Immersed in a world of silence Junior Lisa Davis, joining in the EDCO activities, watches a story unfold, told in sign language about an attempted robbery, and the apprehended's entrapment. Hot dog? or popcorn? EDCO students Erren Cross, Nicole Horn, and Cory Devaney teach the on-lookers how to use simple signs like "hot dog" and "popcorn." Now I know my "a, b, c's." Freshmen Peter Hernandez, and EDCO students Corey Burns, Naree Lor, and Jimmy Hsu practice the sign language "A, B, C's" at one of the stations opened for students during the EDCO day activities. Same Lessons, different teaching methods Freshmen EDCO student Corey Burns, and EDCO teacher Karen Ralston communicate in ASL during their E-Block class.

the Laramie Project

Synopsis:

In October 1998, a twenty-one-year-old student at the University of Wyoming was kidnapped, severely beaten, and left to die, tied to a fence in the middle of a prairie outside Laramie, Wyoming. His bloody, bruised and battered body was not discovered until the next day, and he died several days later in an area hospital. His name was Matthew Shepard, and he was the victim of this assault because he was gay. Moises Kaufman and fellow members of the Tectonic Theater Project made six trips to Laramie over the course of a year and a half in the aftermath of the beating and during the trial of the two young men accused of killing Shepard. They conducted more than 200 interviews with the people of the town. Some people interviewed were directly connected to the case, and others were citizens of Laramie, and the breadth of their reactions to the crime is fascinating. Kaufman and Tectonic Theater members have constructed a deeply moving theatrical experience from these interviews and their own experiences. The Laramie Project is a breathtaking theatrical collage that explores the depths to which humanity can sink, and the heights of compassion we are also capable of.

Noises Off

Synopsis:

Michael Frayn's classic farce tells the story of six actors, their director, and two stage managers who are in production for the farce Nothing On. Act I finds the audience sitting in on a dress rehearsal in the early morning hours of its opening day. The audience is introduced to each character and their personality quirks that contribute to the disaster the production is from the start. In Act II, the audience is backstage at a performance of Nothing On. The show is plagued by the actors' attempts to sabotage each other's performances, and the act is filled with silent, hilarious slapstick action. In the third act, the audience is a true audience at the final performance of Nothing On. The problems the actors had backstage in Act II find their way onstage in Act III, leading to a catastrophic performance with a hilarious conclusion.

“When we first decided to apply to direct, we knew that we wanted a comedy. Not just any comedy, though -- the best comedy. We wanted a show that would be fun and challenging for us as directors, for the cast, and for the crew. We discovered Noises Off was this show when we found ourselves laughing out loud reading it in the library. Noises Off is filled with sidesplitting comedy and hilarious one-liners that grew funnier each time we read them. Noises Off is about the spontaneity and beauty of live theatre, something for which we've gained an immense appreciation in our years at North and were thrilled to have the opportunity to share with an audience.

Noises Off tells the story of six actors, their director, and two stage managers who are in production for the farce Nothing On. Act I finds the audience sitting in on a dress rehearsal in the early morning hours of its opening day. The audience is introduced to each character and their personality quirks that contribute to the disaster the production is from the start. In Act II, the audience is backstage at a performance of Nothing On. The show is plagued by the actors' attempts to sabotage each other's performances, and the act is filled with silent, hilarious slapstick action. In the third act, the audience is a true audience at the final performance of Nothing On. The problems the actors had backstage in Act II find their way onstage in Act III, leading to a catastrophic performance with a hilarious conclusion.

Directing Noises Off was arguably the best thing that either of us has done this year. We could not have imagined a better cast, crew, or production team to work with. It was all of them who made Noises Off such an incredible and enjoyable experience. When Selsdon comes onstage from the audience in Act I and says, "Is it a party?", the audience thinks he must be out of his mind because Nothing On is going to pieces. But really, Selsdon is exactly right. It is a party. And for us, it was the best party of the year.

Right -- Nice to meet you McMurphy played by Aaron Maybury greets his new inmates Billy Bibbitt and Dale Harding during Newton North's production of One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest, December 16-17, 2004. Below -- Say Cheese! The entire cast and crew of the play. Left - time for your medicine patients Nurse Ratched and Dr. Spivey have a little chat with their patients.

One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest

One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest takes an inside look at the workings of mental institutes, the people who are mentally challenged that live in them, and the doctors and nurses that work there. Taking the side of the mentally challenged patients, the play shows how crazy the people who work there are, such as Nurse Ratched. She controls everyone and everything on the floor. Dr. Spivey and the patients, and with an attitude that means business. She gets the job done until Randle P. McMurphy is admitted to the hospital. He puts a whole new twist on the idea of being mentally insane. He causes chaos driving Nurse Ratched insane herself. He becomes friends with the doctor and together they make Nurse Ratched even more furious. He helps the patients to realize that the world outside the cold white walls is an okay place and that it is worth living a good life even if you aren't considered normal by the common population. McMurphy's largest contribution to the patients is with Chief Bromden. Chief Bromden does not speak to anyone and sits alone in his rocking chair all day long. When no one is around he talks to Papa, the last chief of his Native American tribe. McMurphy realizes that Chief Bromden is not a mute at all and helps him to realize that the world is not so bad after all.

We wanted a show that would make people think. One that might turn a few heads, but provide some laughs in the process. What we found was One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest, a staple of the 1960s counter culture that poses question about sanity, morality, and freedom, with a healthy dose of sex, drugs, and rock and roll on the side. Working on this show provided us with an opportunity to examine our own sentiments regarding issues of sexism, racism, and mental illness. In putting Cuckoo's Nest on the stage, we attempted to portray true people rather than stereotypes or diagnoses. Those eleven o'clock nights and weeks of chocolate and soda proved difficult, but with a phenomenal cast and dedicated production staff, we wouldn't trade the experience for anything in the world. In watching One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest, we hope that you learned as much and laughed as loud as we did while directing it.

Brighton Beach Memoirs

Brighton Beach Memoirs is the tale of a young Jewish boy coming of age outside of New York City in the 1940s. Eugene narrates the story of a dysfunctional family dealing with a limited budget and conflicting personalities. When his uncle dies, his aunt and cousins come to live with them in an already full household. Each character experiences different problems, which they feel are being disregarded, leading to turmoil and arguments. Through raging hormones, aspiring acting careers, conflicting morals, and health issues the family overcomes multiple hardships to realize that nothing is more important than being together. When Eugene's father has a heart attack, the family's sole source of income is lost, after his brother, Stan, quit over a moral difference with his boss. The dilemmas escalate when Stan runs away and relatives write that they are moving from Poland. It is only upon Stan's return a few days later and the decision by Eugene's aunt to move her family to a different house because she was tired of constant arguments with her sister, Eugene's mother, that the family realize that being a family is more important than individual issues. Their resolve brings them closer than ever, and Eugene learns that growing up can often be more difficult than being a child.

From the directors:

"The family is a unit where all joys and sorrows are shared among its members. As a result, sadness is more than halved and happiness is much than doubled."

-Daisaku Ikeda

We tried to pick a show that was funny, but tasteful, sentimental, but not cheesy, and most of all a show that everyone can relate to. We feel that Brighton Beach has the perfect balance of all of that. Its comedy ranges from child to adult humor, while also incorporating serious child and adult issues. Finance, puberty, sports, war, sex, discrimination, and growing up are all alluded to, while centering around a family that sticks together, and never forgets love for one another, then together it can overcome any obstacle. Now we invite you to sit back, ignore your family's problems for a while, and get a few laughs out of ours.

Dancing at Lughnasa

Set in 1936 in the county of Donegal in Ireland, Dancing at Lughnasa chronicles the lives of the five Mundy sisters during one "lughnasa summer." Lughnasa is a Celtic god who represents the summer solstice. The sisters are Kate, the oldest and most religious, Maggie, the most spontaneous sister, who tends to break into dance and song during tense moments, Aggie, who cares for their disabled sister, Rose, and knits gloves for a living, and Christina, the youngest sister whose affair with a salesman named Gerry brought shame upon the Mundy family when it resulted in the conception of her son, Michael. The entire play is a flashback from snippets of memories of the adult Michael, played by Pat Craig.

The summer of 1936 is an especially predominant memory for Michael because it was the summer that Father Jack, the sisters' long lost older brother returned from 25 years in South Africa caring for lepers when he was sent home by his superiors due to failing health. The sisters, especially Kate, who cared day and night for Father Jack, who was a priest before going to Africa, made sure that he regained his health. Gerry, having returned that summer to Donegal in pursuit of Christina stayed for a short time, proposed everyday to Michael's mother. However, she never accepted his offer, knowing only too well that Gerry would leave again, which he did. At the end of the play, as the adult Michael recounted the last few days of the summer, and years that came after, it was revealed that his father had lead a double life, having a wife and children in Wales, one son with the same name as Michael.

The ending signifies the split of the family, with Father Jack passing away due to heart attack, and Aggie and Rose running away from the home and living in the streets until the day of their deaths, and the information about Michael's father living a double life.

Bye Bye Birdie

Synopsis:

Bye Bye Birdie is one of the most captivating musical shows of our time. It tells the story of a rock and roll singer who is about to be inducted into the army. The singer, Conrad Birdie, an Elvis-Presley type, has a pompadour and thick sideburns; he wears gaudy gold costumes and speaks in a rugged voice. Albert Peterson, his agent, is a very pleasant and mild mannered young man. Albert's faithful secretary Rose Alvarez keeps him and Birdie moving forward in the world. Rosie concocts one final national publicity plan before Conrad's induction.

Conrad will bid a typical American teen-age girl goodbye with an all-American kiss. Kim MacAfee in Sweet Apple, Ohio wins the honor. All of the phones in her town are already busy during the Telephone Hour as Kim has just been "pinned" to Hugo, a local boy. She is a pretty girl of fifteen and sings with spring like ardor How Lovely to Be a Woman, as she pulls on the plaid woolen socks and the baggy mustard colored sweater considered stylish and popular among young ladies.

The arrival of Birdie in Sweet Apple causes people of all ages to swoon. Birdie says that his success is due to the fact that he is Honestly Sincere when he sings, and the quiet little town goes into a spin. The MacAfee household is completely upset by the visiting celebrity. It is decided that Birdie will give his One Last Kiss on the Ed Sullivan show. Kim's father who laments the whole uproar tries to break into the act and behaves like a ham on the TV show. Hymn for Sunday Evening is a salute the greater glory of Ed Sullivan.

Birdie becomes disgusted with his life and goes out on the town with the teenagers. He feels tense with Albert and is tired of being supervised. The parents of Sweet Apple cannot understand the new generation and express this in Kids. Rosie, still waiting for that band of gold from Albert after eight year invades a Shriners' meeting. An extremely hilarious ballet ensues. She then decides to become the Latin American spitfire that she is painted as, by Albert's lead-footed, catastrophe-ridden mother. She is determined to become Spanish Rose. Kim is reunited with Hugo, and Rose with Albert in the lovely number Rosie. Other hit numbers include A Lot of Livin' to do, and Put on a Happy Face.

Bye Bye Birdie is a satire done with the fondest affection. It gives an insight into the everyday life that is very much part of us all. It is the tops in imagination and frivolity; a show that will be enjoyed by the cast as much as the audience.

Note from the Producer....

One of the most creative choral classes available to Newton North students, The Family Singers is filled with those who love to sing, and want you to hear it. They spend all year preparing for their performances, in which the songs chosen have reason and substance behind them.

by Matthew Murphy

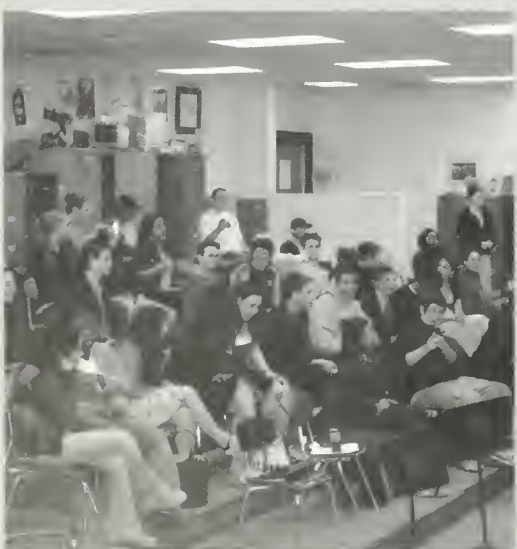

Family Singers is an honors class that challenges every singer with complicated, yet beautifully written song. The Family Singers participate in three major concerts through the year, as well as various shows that we are invited to perform at. Havestfest, Winterfest, and Springfest/Pops Night are the three seasonal events. The group meets four days a week during school to practice on the pieces that are carefully selected by the musical genius and beloved teacher Mr. Richard Travers. Each class is used to work on the songs until the choir achieves perfection. Not only do the students sing songs, but they also learn the basic fundamentals of music theory and sight reading, which are skills that can be used in the future.

The Family Singers spend a lot of time together and improve as they become closer through the year. The group is a step towards maturity and gives the students what they need for any future in singing. The class brings all kinds of people together. Students who are involved in music, theatre, athletics, or students who just like to sing, feel comfortable in the warm hearted environment. The Family Singers is a great opportunity for anyone to have fun and express themselves through the art of music.

ALL TOGETHER NOW The entire Family Singers group belt out a song with enough force to be heard at Newton South. Having spent a lot of time working on their breathing techniques, as well as projection, their volume was well deserved. HOW YOU DOIN'? Family Singers members "smile pretty" for the camera before their performance, not too nervous yet, anticipation began to build later in the evening. DO RE MI Family singers during their Winterfest finale song. AND A ONE, TWO, ONE TWO THREE FOUR Keeping the beat, and adding a little flavor to the performance, Alexi Paraschos, Adam Markiewicz, and Sarah Kearney beat bongos in time to the music and melody of the song.

Jubilee Singers

Students interested in joining the Jubilee Singers and making it a part of their schedule should know that, although it is a lot of hard work, it pays off during the performances, when people can see what has been accomplished. This year's crop of Jubilee Singers were as extraordinary as ever, the auditions having been held during the previous February. The group became quickly bonded, spending every C-Block together, and were able to learn to work hard and perform well together. The class requires that students must learn all of the music and attend a dress rehearsal before each of the performances. Students are also required to stay in the class the whole year to receive full credit.

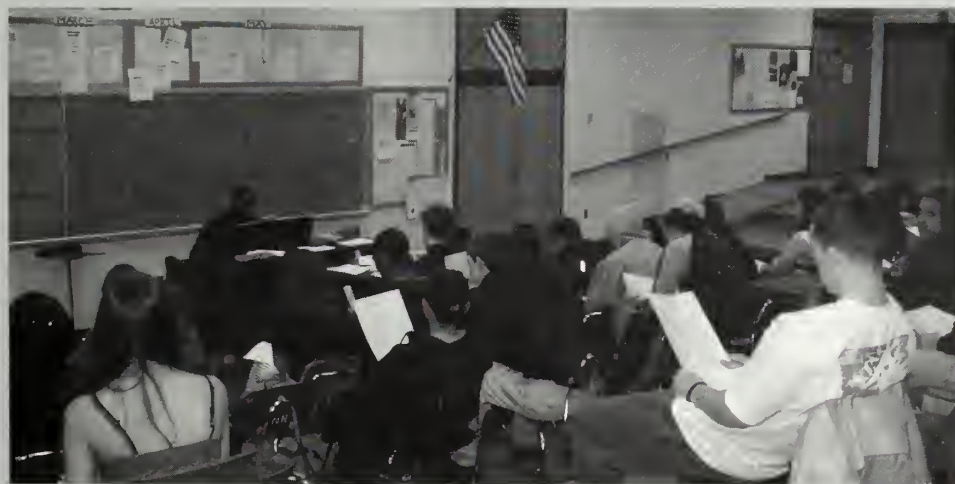

Students who do participate in the Jubilee Singers perform many different types of music, but learn even more behind the curtains, and during class time. They focused this year on jubilees, spirituals, contemporary and traditional gospel music, and traditional African pieces. Each was performed spectacularly, and any audience member could tell that the class had been working very hard all year.

Orchestra

Coinciding with all of the musical programs available at Newton North High School, the Orchestra and String Ensemble strive for performance perfection. The days and nights of the Orchestra and String Ensemble students are filled with practice, and helping each other to get better. Those who play the same instruments help each other out by playing together and listening to others. They spend their time with Adam Grossman, the conductor for both ensembles. Having been in the musical world for years, Mr. Grossman is well-educated in teaching the proper intonations, tones, melody, and, of course, the proper musical flow for each piece. Orchestra and String Ensemble perform several different times during the year, sometimes during the Harvestfest, Winterfest, and Springfest.

When you enter Newton North in your first year of high school, it is hard to comprehend the sheer size and magnitude of everything there is to offer. From the outstanding academic courses, physical education, the arts, and more, many students become lost in the shuffle. Incoming ninth grades who are interested in the performance arts available at Newton North, especially the vocal aspect, can take Vocal Ensemble. This class is the beginning step down the road of your high school career. The standards are very high in this program. With the recommendation of previous music teachers, students enter into the wonderful world of Vocal Ensemble, and set off at a quick pace down their path of choice.

CONCERT CHOIR

Vocal ensemble

Most students who choose to continue their choir education will try out for either Jubilee, Family Singers, or the Concert Choir, which is most closely related to Vocal Ensemble. The Concert Choir encourages students to explore all of their ranges, from the highest note to the deepest, and practices the proper breathing techniques. Concert Choir students not only participate in performances at Newton North, but also in exchange performances with cities in the eastern states. These occurrences allow the Concert Choir students to gather a wider range of musical knowledge, while exposing them to different learning styles and meeting new people. When asked, Concert Choir and Vocal Ensemble students referred to their time in the classroom and during the performances as a great and valuable experience that brought them a lot of enjoyment.

The music department has worked to provide a wide variety of courses for the more musically - inclined students at North. Symphonic band is open to all students who play wind or percussion instruments and would like to pursue their interests. Wind ensemble is an honors - level course that continues with many of the same techniques as symphonic band, but at a more advanced level. Both classes require mandatory attendance at such performances as Harvestfest, Winterfest, and various tours and concerts. "We've worked really hard this year, playing a selection of marking and classical music," comments junior Zach Epstein, the first alto saxophonist in wind ensemble. Wind

For the last 31 years, Newton North High School has had an advanced theater program. The school has been fortunate enough to be provided with two useful theater spaces, the Little Theater and the Lasker Auditorium.

The Little Theater has been used for rehearsals, theater classes, special events, presentations, and faculty meetings. It's shape reflects that of an amphitheater to create a more intimate environment. On the other hand, the Lasker Auditorium is used for larger productions, such as Les Miserables, Bye Bye Birdie, Noises Off, and One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest. Upon entering the lobby of Lasker, you are surrounded by a multitude of posters from each of the productions which have gone up over the years. The Little Theater is home to smaller and more intimate productions and presentations such as To Be Glad Day and the Film Club's movie nights.

Property iNspection

As you walk along the winding hallways of the first floor, you may or may not be aware of the drama department's hidden jewel. Whenever a costume is needed, makeup to be done, props to be placed, the costume room is the place for all your needs. Marissa Schwartz is the Costume Coordinator for all of the shows. "Almost every prop has been donated, from prom dresses to costume jewelry," says Schwartz. If you ever need to use a fake leg in your show, you can come here to find it. For the shows, the directors set up a clothing rack in front of the room to hang costumes and props for their actors.

a-head of the Rest Wigs of a wide variety collect in the costume room from many different shows. "The Drama Training Institute performed the musical, 42 Street, three summers ago. That's where we got the majority of the wigs," said Schwartz.

If a costume is not to be found in this vast array, which is very unlikely, the costume crew is sent out to thrift stores, and in some cases to buy fabric to make their own. Because of this, things accumulate in the room. "Eventually, we would like to have a way of filing where things are in the computer," said Schwartz. In the meantime, the costume room remains a sanctuary to an assortment of apparel fit for any situation.

MORAL SUPPORT This was a prop for the show Who's Life is it Anyway? The show was about a paralyzed woman in the hospital. Schwartz says that it's easy to get props like this, since parents contribute a lot of props to the shows. Their varying professions bring in items from hospitals and other fields of work.

youx Best Dress The costume room holds every costume and prop used for shows at Newton North. Throughout the years people have donated some pretty wacky stuff.

aesthetically pleasing Actors use the mirrors in preparation for a show. They come downstairs, grab their costumes, get their makeup done, and prepare to preform.

Getting iNto Becoming One With Your Character

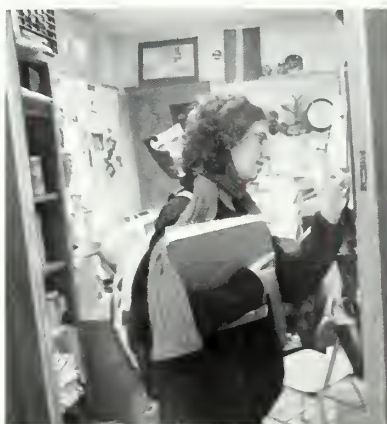

Being a believable actor requires skill, however since all actors are individuals, each one has their own method of becoming one with their character. Part of this process involves making a believable character out of themselves for the audience to enjoy.

Each actor gets into his or her role by using different techniques. The director plays a very important part in what the actors do during the play. The director has a vision of what the character should be, thus enabling them to mold the actor into the shape of perfection. The director gives actors suggestions on how to become more like the characters they envision. Actors use these suggestions to develop their characters further.

In addition to the director's suggestions, an actor uses props, costumes, accessories, and make up. Many students here at North feel that the prop room and its contents help them to feel more in touch with their characters. Senior Voula Collins uses costumes to help her get into her role.

Other ways actors prepare for a performance include applying personal experiences from their life to the lives of their characters. Personal experiences help by providing new ideas that can develop the play. They play off the reactions of other characters and use them to improve upon their own performance. What other characters say and do to their own character helps the actors know how to act so that people can empathize with them. The props and set design help the actors feel as though the performance is happening in real life. Props help people set themselves in the essence of the play. The set creates an illusion of a time frame or a specific setting that the actors can use as a point of reference.

Realizing that the play that one is acting in is only a single chapter of the characters life is also very important. One must go beyond the script and think of what their character would do outside of the play. The actor has to discover the other chapters in the characters life in order to realize why and how they act the way they do in the play.

Comfy props Marris Schwartz sits on a couch in the prop room and discusses Bye Bye Birdie with parent volunteer, Wendy Gedanken. Discussions Junior Alicia Hurst, freshman Emily Andreva, and junior Sarah Schlegel stand in front of the call board and discuss the rehearsal schedule for Bye Bye Birdie. Just a note Senior Jessica Leaser stands in Mr. Brown's office while she writes him a note. That being the best way to get in contact with "Downtown Mr. Brown." Deep in thought Junior Sarah Schlegel inspects the call board on the first floor to find out more about her upcoming character. Generally, Sarah spends time reading the scripts to better understand her character's point of view.

Performing Arts—what do you think of when you hear these words? Most people think, “lights, camera, action!” envisioning a movie set or a play rehearsal. What they forget about are the other forms of expression through performance arts, visual arts, monologue performances, and dance. Newton North has a very rich theater department giving light to the production of well-known and well-written plays and musicals. The school now has of a club for students with any level of experience in dance where they can choreograph, learn and eventually perform their own dances. Orchesis, one of Newton North’s other dancing organizations, focuses on modern and alternative dances, while the dance club combines a mixture of jazz, street jazz, and hip-hop.

After only one year, the Dance Club is ready to show what it has accomplished. Junior co-officers and co-founders of the dance club, Ali Segal and Sabrina Lunin began their journey to set up an initial performance, giving students a time to display their accomplishments. This show will hopefully take place at F.A. Day Middle School where club members perform for the eighth-graders, giving them a tiny taste of what Newton North has in store for them in the coming years.

The question is not how many licks does it take to get to the CENTER of a Tootsie Pop, but rather, how many licks does it TAKE to get to the center of a Tootsie Pop, and I think we can all safely say that we know the answer to that...anyway, thanks to all cast and crew of our show. To our crew, y'all are the best and hardest-working bunch who don't get enough credit. To our actors, we hope you learned a little something about acting, but more importantly, something about yourselves in those six weeks. You either put in the effort, or you don't. Which ever way it goes, you see, you have to decide.

Thanks again and good luck!

Synopsis:

This sharp and funny satire was seen by over two million people in its first two years in production. Accidental Death of an Anarchist is a commentary on the corruption of government and the media, and asks what is truth, and how does one find it? Inspired by real events, this play will make you think and laugh. The play concerns the death of an anarchistic railway worker who fell to his death from a window of the Police Headquarters in Milan. The comical and insane main character, Maniac, leads the audience in questioning those involved in the death and their stories. The ending forces the audience to examine themselves and their world, and makes a political statement about humanity. Even with a serious undertone, this play has laughs for everyone.

We have never had such an enriching and wonderful experience as working on “Business.” Although at times it was difficult, with the help of so many fantastic people we were able to have a final product that we are truly proud of. We thank the cast, crew, Adam Schatz, Mike B-H, and Mr. Brown for all that they have done for us over the years and what they have done for Theatre Ink. None of us could have picked a better way to finish off our four years at North. We could not have done this musical without the drive and experience of our musical director Adam Shatz and phenomenal orchestra. Although at times the cast was a bunch of noisy pains in the butt, we love you and thanks for giving it your all. Synopsis:

In this musical comedy, J. Pierrepont Finch, a window-washer, finds himself attempting to climb to the top of the World Wide Wicket Company with the help of his trusty guidebook, How To Succeed in Business Without Really Trying. With his charismatic smile and witty nature, Finch is able to impress his superiors and gain higher positions in the company, none of which he is qualified for. After also winning the heart of secretary Rosemary Pilkington, Finch must decide what is more important to him: his goals in business or the girl. Through clever dialogue and a complementary musical score, this story shows the humorous side of the 1950's business world.

an evening of ONE acts

"Blended! An evening of staff and student performances" is having it's third production on April 6-8 in the Little Theatre.

The first evening of staff and student performances consisted of many small dramatic pieces, some all student, some all staff, some a combination. The production was called "Voices".

In its second year last year, produced by JoAnn Campbell, three dramatic pieces and two musical pieces combined the talent of staff and students yet again! In this year, the name, "Blended!" was adopted by the show. 2005's version of "Blended!", produced by English and Special Education teacher Lisa Goldthwaite, includes two comic one act plays. The first is "Once Upon a Beginning" by E. Eugene Perry, directed by Math teacher Dennis Klem and starring faculty members. Senior Dan Silverstein has his directorial debut with "Babel's in Arms" by David Ives, featuring a student cast. Finally, Math and Special Education teacher Amy Lein is organizing several musical interludes with staff and student performers. This year's "Blended!" crew is again a mix of students and staff working under the guidance of Ms. Goldthwaite, Mr. Brown, and Michael Barrington-Haber, technical director.

every year, Newton North and Newton South participate in a play together. This year, the play is King Henry IVth, part 1 by William Shakespeare.

King Henry IVth, part 1 is a two part series created by William Shakespeare. Part 1 is the story of a strained relationship between father and son, who are the reigning monarchs of England. King Henry IVth is planning what he thinks is the long-awaited religious Crusade over Europe. During his planning, a rebel family of nobles, the Percys, who are angry at Henry because he refuses to pay off his debt to them. They stir up trouble in the south while Henry Percy, who was supposedly loyal to Prince Harry, son of King Henry, refuses to release soldiers loyal to the king in the North and is brought into court for questioning.

Meanwhile, Prince Harry is spending his time in the "seedy side" of London, hanging out in taverns with robbers and highwaymen. When Henry Percy, the son of the rebels who are leading the rebellion befriends King Henry, Prince Harry becomes jealous and territorial. He soon becomes the young monarch his kingdom needs and challenges Harry to a fight and wins. The play ends where part 2 picks up; powerful rebellious forces still remain in Britain and King Henry is forced to send his sons and soldiers out to fight them in part 2.

During the last few weeks of the summer, the tiger football team came to tryouts and worked hard to prepare for the games ahead. Players came back this past summer hoping for a winning season. As the season progressed, they played as a well-oiled machine, making it all the way to the playoffs after defeating Brookline during the annual Thanksgiving Day Football Game. The tiger football team started the season slowly, yet as the season progressed, they picked up the pace. The team turned around their record beating both Braintree and archrival Brookline to take the Bay State Carey title. The team was able to advance into the state semifinals where they lost a heartbreaking game to the undefeated Acton-Boxborough, who went on to win the state title. A huge factor in helping the tigers rally to win the Bay State Conference was fan support. With every touchdown the tiger football team made their fans go wild. They have had a fantastic season supported by strong team unity and they look forward to an even more successful season next year.

With a rocky start to their season, they persisted with spirit and talent to finish fourth in the Bay State Cheerleading Competition. Incredible athleticism, flexibility, stunts, shouting, and, of course, the pom-poms all molded the varsity cheerleading team. At every football game they shouted their hearts out encouraging the tiger football team to go the extra mile, and score the extra touchdown. "We had a really good football season and our stunts were incredibly strong," says captain Emma Hyatt. The cheerleaders acted as the spirit behind each football game. Without them, fans would be missing out on a great opportunity to support their team. This year's varsity team was led by captain Emma Hyatt. "We improved with each competition both individually and as a team," says Hyatt, whose leadership helped the team greatly in its successful season. During the Bay State Competition, the cheerleading squad placed 4th with 145.5 points. During the South Regionals they scored 151 points. The varsity cheerleading team did a great job during the regular season and showed their routines off with style at the championships.

With an eager and energetic group of talented underclassmen, the girls' soccer team showed up for preseason knowing that they would be a much more competitive team than in years past. Led by senior tri-captains Angela Viscomi, Keveny Glynn, and Britt Spackman, the girls' soccer team made it to the semifinals of the state tournament. The tigers fell to Marshfield in a close match that ended in a heart-wrenching loss on penalty kicks. Senior tri-captain Angela Viscomi led the way in the playoffs, providing many key plays for the tigers. A major force that helped keep the tigers in contention for the state title was goaltender Ali Amira. Amira had a spectacular season making many saves in net. She helped keep her team in every game by keeping the scores close. Although for much of the season the boys' soccer team was the center of attention, the girls stole the limelight with their strong playoff performance. Even though they lost in the state semifinals, the girls exceeded their expectations for this incredible season. These tigers will hold their heads high and be ready for an even more thrilling season next year.

Hendrick played a key role in the girls' success this season. Getting the Boot Junior goaltender Ali Amira sends the ball down the field with a powerful punt. The boys' cross country team went 11-0 during the regular season, leading the tigers to finish with a perfect record, and an eventual state championship. Senior Chris Barnicle, a co-captain with senior Dan Chebot, led the tigers to their championship. They won first place at the state meet in Gardner, MA. As state champion, Barnicle represented Massachusetts at the New England Cross Country competition in New York where he finished in first place, and advanced to the National Cross Country Championships in San Diego, California, placing sixth. Junior David Polgar also finished strongly. Other key contributors to the victory were seniors Evan Morse, Clayton Lloyd, co-captain Dan Chebot, and juniors Doug Brecher and Noah Jampol. The tigers have been a strong team for many years, consistently finishing with an untarnished record. This year they took home the state title. There were many new runners on the team this year, creating a great learning experience with the many veterans. The team's strong unity helped new runners develop their skills. It's hard to beat a state championship, but the tigers are looking forward to another spectacular season next year.

Captain Says

Hey everyone, thanks for a fun and memorable season. It was great coming to practice and seeing every single person there every single day, especially the underclassmen. We feel that this season "good times" were had with the girls team, and we hope that this tradition of our guys actually talking to girls will continue next year. Congratulations seniors, who will graduate having never lost a meet. 45-0 is an impressive record, and we are officially the best fall sports team in the school. And regardless of what others say, our team spirit is the best in the school, even if only seven of us ever did it.

The Newton North field hockey team came to pre-season prepared for a competitive year. With a strong group of upperclassmen, the girls were determined to graduate as winners.

"The record doesn't reflect all the talent and experience of the team," says junior Hilana Bernheimer, referring to the team's 5-7-4 record.

"Our team was very bonded this year, and we're all still really close," adds Bernheimer. The team thrived under the leadership of tri-captains Lena Andrews, Emileigh Mercer, and Julie Quinn who played hard throughout the season. Another key player was sophomore Tasha Cohan. Cohan was an athletic and motivated player who did wonders for the tigers. The field hockey team bonded at team dinners, practices, and even went on to order team jerseys after the season had ended. The tigers hope to return next season with the same effort put forth this year and a new line of determined underclassmen.

Returning to the golf season with strong leadership from tri-captains Benjie Moll, Jeff Clark and Dave Silverman, the 2004 NNHS tiger golf team finished atop the Bay State Carey division with a 13-2-1 record. In both meetings with archrival Brookline, Newton North was the winner. "Our last match versus Brookline was a great way to end the season," said tri-captain Benjie Moll. The team utilized its depth and took advantage of all of its players along the road to winning 13 matches. The golf team's experienced players helped to teach and guide the younger players throughout the season. Their success was carried throughout the postseason, NNHS finished 2nd overall in the North Regional State Qualifiers and 7th overall in the state. The team was led by consistent performances from seniors Jeff Clark, Benjie Moll and sophomore Danny Moll. Sophomore Ben Cheney had the lowest round with a 2 under par of 34 in a match against Dedham. "Fantastic, great team, great season, great victories" said coach Phil Rosseau. At the beginning of the season, the players on the girls' varsity volleyball team started off with a strong attitude and high hopes for a great start to the new season. The new players to the varsity team were given a warm welcome by the returning players eager to start off a strong season. During home games the crowd played a crucial part in the way the game was conducted. They gave the players an extra boost, helping the tigers to keep fighting even if they were down. Varsity player Sarah Wengert explains, "I was expecting a really great season because we were able to adjust so well to new positions and that helped us grow as a team." The enthusiasm of the team was always supported by a feeling of team unity. The players were able to work together and they all played strong in games, even though they didn't always come out on top. The team played a strong season and were able to succeed through unity and team spirit. Led by seniors Melissa Estabrook, Julianna Strom, Becky Lebowitz, and Laura Satwicz, the team made it into the Bay State tournament, but were eliminated in early playoff action. All of you are incredible; we couldn't be more proud of all our swimmers and divers. The divers had to adjust to a new coach, but pulled through exceptionally. Boys' basketball

As the days began to grow shorter in late 2004, the spirits and hopes of the Newton North boys' basketball team grew larger and larger. Led by senior captains Matt Westman, John McNamara, and Mike Scheffler, the team posted a perfect 19-0 regular season that finished with a thundering run for the State Championship. Some of the key players for the tigers included juniors Anthony Gurley and Corey Lowe, who gave North versatility on the court in addition to being league-leading scorers. The tigers were consistently high in the state rankings for the entire season, but went one step further to take home the State Championship, a NNHS boys' basketball first. The team finished first in Eastern Massachusetts, continuing on to beat rival Brookline in the second round of the State Tournament, followed by dramatic wins over Taunton, New Bedford, and Lawrence. Orange and black face paint, bright senior '6th Man Shirts,' tiger capes, and student cheers followed the team around from game to game, outdoing every opponent's fan base without a doubt. Whether the game was in our very own gym, at UMass Boston, the Fleetcenter, or even all the way at UMass Amherst, the turn out of fans and the volume of the student cheers proved that no other school has as much spirit or pride.

Finally, on Saturday, March 20th at UMass Amherst's Mullen Center, the tigers faced Springfield Commerce for an intense State Championship game, the tip-off at precisely 8:04 p.m. A close game most the way, the tigers pulled ahead within the last few minutes, decisively winning the thrilling championship game, 74 - 65. "Becoming state champions has been an amazing experience," says junior Corey Lowe. The team's dedication, teamwork, and drive to succeed created a basketball program that will compete strongly for many years to come.

The Newton North Boys' Gymnastics Team began the season with a strong core of underclassmen after many seniors graduated last year. Despite these challenges, the tigers were able to come through with an impressive record of 4 - 3. In postseason, the tigers went to the State Tournament, outperforming expectations with a third place finish. The team played through many injuries early on in the season including those to junior tri-captains Eddie Han and Mike Levitt, along with sophomore Mike Brown. Fortunately, they all recovered quickly and had a strong finishing stretch to help their fellow tri-captain Luke Johnson lead the team into the postseason.

"Although we had many injuries, many of our younger gymnasts were able to get some valuable experience," says junior Carlos Barrera. Han adds, "our team is unique in that practically every player will be returning next year;" the tigers will lose only one senior next season. With their strong experience and team unity, the tigers hope to return next year with an even deeper and more powerful team than ever before.

We may not always win, but we're always having fun. From getting lost in Bellingham, to getting fat off of everyone's Tanzania candy, the girls' gymnastics team had a great time this season. Ever since Abby introduced us to "Ice, Ice Baby" and "Spice up your Life," they became our theme songs, and whether it was Amanda's fears,

Libby's alligator stories, Becca's quoting movies (while getting beaten up by Sonya), or Sam's problems with the Big Fan, we always found a way to laugh. And where would we be without Mr. Chin? His poems and his bottle openers helped us get through this season. So just remember: move as fast as you can when you hear "TRACK!" and don't eat your oranges around Amanda. We love you girls!

The Newton North Girls' Gymnastics Team played well this season. As one of the smallest teams at North, the girls grew very close. "We really had a great time this season and improved a lot," says junior Becca Stahl, a co-captain with senior Abby Fischer. The team finished the season with a 2 - 9 record, although many on the team felt that the record didn't reflect the team's true abilities. "We started the season with a young team," says junior Judea Beatrice, adding, "over the course of the season, we became very close and unified." The tigers are very happy with the strong friendships that they've fostered, and hope to continue having a tight-knit group of gymnasts for many seasons to come.

on sound teamwork. Junior Anna Ziskend says, "Everyone worked hard and improved their skiing but, most importantly, we created strong friendships that we will never forget." Although as a team the

Winter Wonderland

Gate by Gate

Snow? What snow? The Newton North Nordic Ski team began their season without snow. The team focused on running and various other weight training exercises to get into shape in preparation and anticipation for the large snowfall that was to come. The Weston Ski track, home track for the tigers, was no longer barren but instead covered with inches of powdery snow. Snowstorm after snowstorm, the skiers and their coach showed up to practice. The ski team trained by racing among themselves, holding relay competitions, and occasionally finishing off practices with a game of capture the flag or tag. Pat

Garrison, their coach, was out there with the team every day, single-handedly coaching and motivating the tireless skiers. Senior captains Scott Cole, Ben Goldenberg, Josh Wessler, Julie Caplow, and Leah Ofsevit were an encouraging influence and vital addition to the team, both on the snow and off, helping the team bond. To wrap up a very successful season, the NNHS tigers participated in the annual "sprints" competition. A "sprint" is a semi-formal race against other local teams where the skiers dress up in crazy and goofy outfits and before sprinting a short distance to the finish. There were several exciting rounds of sprints to determine the fastest sprinter in the league, and both North teams finished in the top ten. The boys placed seventh in the state, and the girls placed tenth in the state. After this successful season, Newton North's Nordic Ski Team has hopes to continue racing well for many seasons to come.

Under the leadership of senior captains Alex Miles, David Silverman, Matt Dinger, Norman Birenbaum, Rion Vaughan, and Nader Moghadam, the tigers finished in third place overall for their league. The team finished with a 17 - 3 regular season record, dramatically improving their record from last season; a total of nine tiger wrestlers qualified to participate in the State Tournament. "The team really improved this year, and wrestlers stayed committed to staying in their weight classes to keep us on track," says varsity coach John Staulo. This year's winter cheerleaders had a very strong season under the veteran leadership of senior Emma Hyatt. The team had a new coach this year and worked very hard the entire season to prove their excellence. The tigers would often stay into the late hours of the night practicing in the cafeteria to improve their routines. "We completely revised our routine this year, adding more difficult stunts and other challenging elements," says captain Emma Hyatt, referring to the team's intensive practice sessions. The varsity cheerleaders, who cheer for the varsity basketball team, played a large part in keeping the North home crowd constantly energized. The tigers hope to extend their string of successful seasons into next season and for many years to come.

says Breydo, who has been on the team since freshman year. Powerful swimmers for the tigers included juniors Aaron Lyons, Jason Cohen, and James Bao, along with freshman Ben Grassian. "Underclassmen really provided a lot of talent," comments Bao, while junior Brett McLean says, "the team was successful because it was composed of many good swimmers, not just one superstar." Tiger lacrosse is full of potential this year. Coming off a 12 - 8 record and the loss of 9 seniors, we return with a talented and committed group of players. A combination of skills, experience and athleticism will assist us in achieving our goals of developing into a competitive squad, while building team chemistry with the compliments of younger capable players. Many players have realized the potential of this year's team and have been preparing themselves during the off season with participation in fall/winter leagues, clinics and conditioning programs.

The expectations of this team will be very high. Our defense will be anchored by co - captain Joey Leung, a cerebral defenseman with good game sense and solid skills. He will be supported by senior Rion Vaughan, and juniors Max Abbott, Augie Shanahan and Jack Hall. Senior Marco Barbone, a team leader and heady defenseman with good hands, may also contribute at attack. There will be a battle for the starting goalie position. Sophomore Brian Padilla is athletic and quick, and finds creative ways of getting "in the way" of a lot of shots. Sophomore Brendan Vaughan will be itching for playing time.

Our offensive game will be well balanced. Senior co - captain Mark Dargon is a quick and crafty mid-fielder who can create unsettled situation and distributes the ball well. Nick Pfeifer, a team leader, is a strong lefty threat and a reliable finisher. Speedster Nick Mastroianni, a tough and tenacious mid-fielder, also possesses a dangerous outside shot. Responsible for a majority of goal scoring will be attackman Thomas Foote and Brendan Rooney.

Thomas is an active dodger with good size and will draw a lot of attention. A formidable combination of size, speed and strength, makes Brendan a constant threat as both scorer and feeder.

I am looking forward to the 2005 tennis season, and I feel that our team will be very competitive in our league and in the South section. Our captains, Doug Fleischer and Ben Goldenberg, have been working hard in the pre season to get in great shape and have held some voluntary fitness practices to help the rest of the kids get ready for the season.

Our goals continue to reflect the philosophy of working hard to achieve success, being united as a team, being mentally and physically prepared for all matches and having a lot of fun.

Ready Position

After last year's fantastic season, the 2005 addition of the Newton North girls' tennis team will not be overlooked by any team in the Bay State Conference or in the entire South Section. The team appears to be up for the challenge, led by six seniors, all the returning players have hit the courts running. We welcome four new freshman to the group as this year's goal is building more of a team concept. Our conditioning and preparation standards for each and every challenge set forth by last year's team will be important to this season's success. We will continue to play the game at the highest standard and improve our reputation as a competitive team that other teams look forward to competing against, win or lose. We both feel fortunate, excited, and ready to be coaching the team in our second season

Last year our team went undefeated during the regular season. This year, we are bringing the same hard-work and intensity, but at a much higher level. We have a strong returning team, and although we lost some seniors, we are looking for the underclassmen to step it up. The teams in the Bay State League gained a lot of respect for us last season and we are anticipating competitive matches.

SPRING In Boys' Outdoor Track

The boys' track team hopes to continue its quest for the triple crown for the 2004-2005 school year. Having just won the Indoor All State Championship in track and the Cross Country All State Championship this fall, they hope to add the outdoor crown to their accomplishments. They will also be defending their outdoor crown from 2004, when they won the All State Title.

Not lost in the sights is the Bay State League Title which they have won for 6 consecutive years. Led by Chris Barnicle, David Polgar, Jed Carpenter, David Slifer, and Russell Pitts, the Tigers are poised to accomplish their goals. Also excelling for the team should be Pat Craig (Div. 1 state champ in 2004), Kyle Greenidge in the long jump and triple jump, Evan Morse (mile), Cailean Robinson and Gordon Forbes in the sprints, Tim Columba, David Smith, Sam Hoff, Rob Cant, Matt Klein in the throws, as well as Nick Van Niel, Jon Garshick, Shane Lyons in the Hurdles, and complimenting Barnicle and Polgar (State Champions in the 2-mile and mile) will be DanChebot, Noah Jampol, Doug Brecher, Clayton Lloyd, and Ankit Prakash.

On an individual level, Chris Barnicle hopes to affirm his position as the number 1 distance runner in the country by competing in national competitions. So too should Jed Carpenter show that he ranks among the country's best in the triple jump. Jed is also a state champion in the 400 meter run in 2004. A great season looms ahead for the Tigers.

Maximum Velocity

The Newton North Girls' Outdoor Track Team will begin the 2005 season with strong aspirations of defending their division I State Relay title and of repeating as the Class A State Champions. Though the team graduated sixteen varsity letter winners (eight of whom were state scorers), it will return eleven senior and four junior varsity letter winners from last year's undefeated team, bolstered further by an outstanding group of sophomores.

The team goals for this season will center around earning its fourteenth league title in sixteen years, while attempting to win the State Relays, Class A Championships and All State Championships. As in the past, the focus will be on individual achievement and on trying to achieve more than two hundred personal records throughout the season. Led by senior captains Julie Caplow, Kate Greenough, Eliza Royer and RuRu Wang, this year's team will rely heavily on the talent, experience and leadership of its senior class, particularly Azuree Catledge (a state finalist in the long jump and 100), Clarice Ferolito (league finalist in the hurdles), Lizzie Fulton (state finalist in the 400), Anna Schindler (state finalist in the mile), Angela Viscomi (the team's top returning shot putter) and Simone Weisman (state finalist in the 800). Supporting this outstanding group will be underclass members Jess Barton (800, mile and two mile), Julie Blanchard (100, 200, 400), Lily Brown (200, 400), Kat Chiong (400), Arielle Dembe (100, 200), Morgan Faer (hurdles), Katie McLean (800, mile) and Leah Weisman (hurdles). Each of these athletes has experience competing at the state level and should provide this year's team with tremendous depth and balance, along with outstanding leadership ability. With more than seventy girls on the team, such leadership will be essential for team success. Though the team goals may appear rather high, achieving those goals are quite realistic with such a strong nucleus to work with.

What track means to us... Taking an hour to start practice... "Inspirational" quotes and videos from JT... Bus singalongs... Camping out on the football field for the relay for life... Stuffing our faces at team dinners... Running around the school frantically looking for a bar of soap, an Italian dictionary, and three tennis balls... Surprise water balloon attacks...

Boring the audience at the varsity banquet... Jumping into Crystal Lake... Soggy Saturday mornings at the track... Cup messages... Zipping up in the tunnel... Winning is what makes a team great, but what makes a great team is great people. Every one of our 80+ girls contributes to our success through hard work and dedication. As a team, we constantly motivate and inspire each other to reach and surpass our personal bests. At the same time, we understand the importance of enjoying track

it's not as easy as you thiNk.

Are you a student who dreads going to gym class during the school day? Do you hate putting on those baggy clothes and smelly sneakers? If this describes you, then Contract Gym is right for you. Contract gym is for students who don't have enough time in their busy school day for a PE. class.

Most students prefer Contract Gym because they can get gym credit for participating in an activity that they would be doing anyway. But don't be fooled by the fact that your activities can get you gym credit because it's not always that easy. You have to do a minimum of two hours per week of the activity of your choice. School sports, non-school sports teams, and working out at the gym (unless previously enrolled in Personal Fitness) are not accepted activities for Contract Gym.

There are numerous activities people do to obtain Contract Gym credits. Yoga, weight lifting programs, tennis lessons, and martial arts are just a few of those activities. Contract gym has been a life-saver to the students, but is a burden to others who chose it.

Liz Rosen's four steps to being successful iN Contract gym:

1. Complete your first hour of Contract Gym. Don't forget to get your sheet signed!
2. Save time in your week for your second hour of Contract!
3. On Friday, bring your pink slip into the Athletic office.
4. Put your slip in the correct box. Don't be late!

"Being able to exercise in a form that you choose, and on your own time is the best thing about Contract Gym."

Katie O'Gara

"I like the fact that I am able to take more classes during the school day."

Paulina Mitropoulos

"I like having more frees in my schedule."

Loren Waldron

"I signed up for Contract gym before I knew what a commitment I would have to make. I ended up having to drop it because of all the extra curricular activities I do."

Kate Greenough

"I like the flexibility of being able to do the activity I love, when I want to do it."

Cheebah soccer is like a rhinoceros; it's tough, dangerous, and eats burritos whenever necessary. Basically, you don't mess with Cheebah Soccer. When we saunter on the field, our presence is, to say the least, frightening. Everyone scatters like a flock of pigeons. And then you pass us a soccer ball, and we work the magic. Cheebahs puts the hammer down and everyone knows it. The other team knows it. You can tell because they're trembling like newborns. They know that they're about to receive a beating and by the end of the game, they'll wish they were never born at all. Cheebahs systematically destroy; we cut off all perimeters and attack at the weak point. No messing around - we just destroy. By halftime the score is something like 13 to zip, and you know that the beating hasn't even started.

Just as the entire team of Cheebahs is like a well-oiled destruction machine, the players are so physically apt for the game that any other skill which they might possess becomes trivial. When you are among the select few that are able to contribute to the Cheebahs machine, you know that you were born to play the game. The reason for the unsurpassed skills of Cheebahs can be contributed to the rigorous practice and conditioning which our warriors go through. Rain or shine, blizzard or heat wave, Cheebahs can be found on the field at all hours of the day honing down their natural skills.

Fitness. Something people strive for every day- to be fit. That is what Newton North Biology teacher Ms. Jodie Cohen does in her spare time. Cohen competes in a competition called Miss Fitness America which combines dance, gymnastics, and strength into a fitness routine. "It takes a lot of hard work" says Cohen who can spend up to ten hours a week doing cardio workouts. Two more hours of routine practice and another four of strength training create a very intensive week. "Sometimes I get up at 5:30 a.m. before school starts to get an hour of cardio out of the way" adds Cohen who has placed very well in regional competitions. Cohen's top scores include a second place finish in the physique category and a ninth place finish for her routine. Another important part of training for fitness competitions is an eating plan. Cohen says that she often gets compliments for how "good" she eats. Cohen says: "The eating plan is very hard but if you stick with it, [fitness training] can be an amazing experience."

Educational

Educational clubs are about more than school, they are about making friends and learning about the world around us. From debating foreign affairs and international relations in Model U.N. to competing for knowledge in Science Club, academic clubs satisfy a wide range of talents and interests. With over eighty clubs to choose from at Newton North, anyone can find one to suit them. Many of these clubs offer competitive atmospheres to test your knowledge and abilities in a variety of topics. Traditionally, Newton North has produced quality teams that have succeeded on state and even national levels. For example, Mock Trials has been overwhelmingly successful in the past years competing in many conferences across Massachusetts. Since academic - focused clubs are looked on positively by colleges as extracurricular activities, the number of clubs and the attendance in each grows annually.

Model U.N. - Model U.N. Club simulates the U.N. Each member is a delegate from a country of their choice. International issues, such as the war in Iraq, are debated every week. In addition, the club sends delegations to conferences at Harvard and in New York City.

MOCK TRIALS - Mock Trials is a Massachusetts Bar Association sponsored program that calls for students to assume the roles of courtroom attorneys and trial witnesses. Each year, the Mass Bar creates a case packet including 6 affidavits from 6 witnesses, 3 for the prosecution or plaintiff and 3 for the defense. Students then write direct and cross examinations for each witness and perform them in court. The Mass Bar holds a tournament spanning two months in which 130 schools from Massachusetts compete with each other for the state title. The Massachusetts state champion attends the national tournament, a tournament between the champions from 44 different states in the U.S.

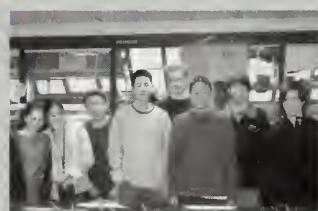

Taking Note Senior Anne Xu prepares her notes before beginning a Science Team practice. Science Team met after school and competed in such competitions as the Science Olympiad. Revved Up A car acts as a hands-on device for members of the Automotive Technology Club. Auto Tech. Club met during X-blocks to learn about the inner workings of motor vehicles. Model Behavior Matt Kamisher-Koch, Dan Asher, Mike Shapira, Madeleine Abromowitz, the officers of Model U.N., show their representative countries with pride. Model U.N. met after school on Mondays to discuss and debate international affairs.

SPEECH CLUB - Speech Club is comprised of a small group of motivated individuals who meet weekly to rehearse speeches for conferences and offer constructive criticism to improve their oratory skills.

AUTOMOTIVE TECH. CLUB - Automotive Tech. Club teaches basic automotive principles and repair. It also explores basic problem solving methods and troubleshooting techniques used in today's industry, particularly how these techniques apply to physics and scientific methods of investigation.

SCIENCE TEAM - Science team competes across the state to test their skill and knowledge. Officer Anne Xu leads the practices in which students split into groups and race to answer questions first.

TEAMPACT - Team P.A.C.T., which stands for Pulling Against Cancer Together, is North's cancer awareness club. Major projects include fundraising $5,000 for research foundations like The Jimmy Fund, participating in the Walk for Life, and Cancer Awareness day in March.

GSA - The GSA (Gay Straight Alliance) is made up of all types of people... gay, straightlesbian, bisexual, transgendered, etc. The group meets twice per week for discussions, support, and education. The goal of the GSA is to provide the NNHS community with the tools necessary to live in a diverse world. Some activities include ToBGLAD Day, Youth Pride and fundraising. This year, we're pleased to have Congressman Barney Frank speak to the student body.

Human Rights Board - The Human Rights Club incorporates students, faculty, and parents in an effort to discuss and inform others on issues of Human Rights. The club was founded by English teacher Inez Dover in 1996. Members took an active role this year to raise funds for the tsunami relief fund to aid victims in Southeast Asia.

M.V.P. - The Mentors in Violence Protection program consists of Newton North students who are dedicated to promoting gender respect and preventing relationship violence. These mentors not only raise awareness at North, but also at the Newton middle schools through visits to eighth grade classes.

ENVIRONMENTAL CLUB - Definitely the coolest club out there, but we're not just about recycling, we're about saving the world. With our forces combined, we are Captain Planet.

Mentor Madness MVP member sophomore Abby Gorman prepares for MVP Day. MVP met after school to promote awareness of violence in relationships. Cook for a Cause Juniors Emily Proia and Rachel Wilson and sophomore Jillian Zeller work at the Bake Sale on MVP Day. The profits for the bake sale helped victims of domestic violence. Speak Out GSA member sophomore Chen Chen reads a speech at a presentation during To Be Glad Day. The GSA, which organizes To Be Glad Day, meets every X - block to discuss issues dealing with how teenagers act regarding sexual orientation.

iNspirational

Activism

Newton North students prove their commitment to improving the world by joining clubs to aid those around them. Clubs such as the Gay/Straight Alliance (G. S. A.), Mentors in Violence Protection (M. V. P.), Animals Rights Club, and AIDS Orphans Education Project aim to teach others about the injustices that are suffered around the world and the things we can do to prevent them. Pulling Against Cancer Together (Team P. A. C. T.) and the Environmental Club take an active role in their causes, donating money to cancer research organizations and organizing Newton North's recycling operations, respectively. North boasts an abundance of activism clubs which support a variety of causes across the globe. Students are given an opportunity to debate issues that are important to them and to become involved in efforts to improve our lives and the lives of others. Students can also join nation-wide groups such as the Junior National Association of the Deaf (N. A. D.) and the Students Against Destructive Decisions Club (S. A. D. D.). Making a difference and being involved in an effort to help others is important no matter what age you are or where you live. Every voice counts when it comes to creating a better world.

PEER MENTORS - Newton North is a very large and very busy school. With over 2,100 students enrolled, it can be very easy to get lost in the chaos, especially for someone new to the school. The Peer Mentor Program was started in 1993 by guidance counselor Michele Kennedy to help transfer students adjust to life at North more quickly. In addition to working with transfer students, Peer Mentors also act as hosts to prospective Newton North students.

CLASS '08 - President: Gerry Ferrandez, Vice Presidents: Maya Massing-Schaffer, Gaby Cohen, Lily Lewis-McNeil, Kortney Sumner. Advisers: math teacher Stephen Feiss and science teacher, Kim Mayer. Freshmen class officers spend their time working on the freshmen boat cruise.

CLASS '07 - President: Blagoje Djordjevic, Vice Presidents: Michael Brown, Hayley Kerstein, Nikki Tennermann, and Ken Zhao. Advisers: science teacher, Michael Quinlan and math teacher Nicole Novak. As the sophomore class officers, one of their responsibilities is planning the sophomore sleepover and creating ways to raise money for it. They have planned a car wash and even a design contest for the Spirit Week T-shirts.

working together

Members of school - associated clubs devote their time to improving the school and making everyone's high school experience the best it can be. To make the school more student-friendly, the

S.F.A. has put a lot of effort into the re - opening of Main Street. The class officers brainstorm creative fundraisers to earn money for end of the year activities. From selling carnations and school - spirited clothes, to washing cars and holding bake sales, the class officers find all kinds of great fundraising opportunities. The Peer Educators welcome new students to our school and familiarize them with the building and the school system. PAWS members help solve conflicts between peers and keep our school community closer. Guidance Aides acquaint incoming freshmen with their new school and help form connections between peers through a program called "breaking barriers". The devotion these students show to their organizations creates a welcoming atmosphere for students and staff.

CLASS '05 - President: Pat Craig, Vice Presidents: Saba Najatian, Lena Andrews, Dan Eisenberg, and Drew Vello. Advisers: special education teacher, Linda Fries, and electrical teacher, Chris Xerras. Senior class officers are in charge of arranging the senior prom, and leave a senior present from all the remaining fundraiser money.

They have also been working to re - open Main Street and appoint students to monitor the halls, minimizing noise and trash.

S.F.A. - The student members meet with faculty to discuss issues that affect everyone. Their focus this year has been creating the senior lounge.

Tasty Treats Steve Hazeltine sells Guidance Aides juniors Maggie Lloyd, Matt Zimmer, and Claire Mandel-Folley, baked goods on Main street, December 17. The Guidance Aides held a bake sale to raise money for supplies and T-shirts to help their organization. Hard at Work Counselor Michele Kennedy, adviser for Peer Mentors, works at her computer. She made the arrangements for transfer and visiting students to pair up with Peer Mentors, who would show them around the school. Feel the Love Senior Saba Najatian gets a hug from Barry housemaster Anthony Parker. Najatian was a vice president for the class of 2005.

Tiger Magazine

Tiger Magazine, Newton North's own television broadcast, does an assortment of fictional and non-fictional pieces about the school and other current issues. Produced by the students in the advanced television production course, Tiger Magazine is in its twenty - first year and has become a staple in the community. The students, primarily juniors and seniors, work during G - block to create half - hour segments that are broadcast every three weeks on a local television station. Ranging in style from silly to dramatic, the shows are written, performed, filmed, and edited by the students. Tiger Magazine offers a hands - on opportunity to any students interested in broadcast journalism. The final product is a collaboration that expresses the creativity of all involved.

The Other Side of the Camera The staff of Tiger Magazine gathers together for a commemorative picture. Fast Forward Senior Leah Riklin edits some film after school. Tiger Magazine met G-blocks but students could use their free time to do extra work as well.

“Yo. Check our mad skilz. We flow with da Rossmanator so don't play a hater. Papadoples poppin' dollas like a digitizing shotgun mic. A scoop, a fresnel, and an ellipsoidal. What we got here is a ryhm sshmorgishboidal. So next time you're passing by room 324 you better watch your back because we crucio muggles everyday!”

Thoughtprints

Thoughtprints is a literary and artistic magazine that publishes annual calendars and books to showcase students' work. The magazine accepts work from all students in the school, primarily literary for the book and photographic for the calendar. Editors of the magazine then debate on which pieces to include and where to put them. Thoughtprints offers an opportunity for students to express themselves creatively through their work, which can be seen by members of the Newton North community who might not otherwise see them.

In Charge Seniors News editor Mark Harrold, Editor in chief Marina Kreatsoulas, Graphic manager Josh Sadownik, and Editor in chief Mike Seager consult on ways to improve the book. The Newtonite met every day after school and produced a paper worthy of numerous awards.

Volume 83 was a true team effort. 23 editors and managers coordinated a strong staff of nearly 50 students. We published once every two weeks with a press run of 3,000. Both students and parents read our paper, which covered school news, arts and performances, on campus presentations, sports, and human interest features. We also paid for all our production costs by selling our own advertising and subscriptions.

Each editor knew his or her role on the paper. Everyone worked together as a team so that we could deliver the best possible product to the students every other Friday. Every editor truly understood the importance of his or her role on the paper. The circulation managers knew that their job was just as important to the success of the paper as the news editor's. We worked together through several problems and persevered even through times of extreme stress. We kept focused on deadlines, stayed determined to sell enough ads to publish and called the hockey coach back and left seven different messages trying to reach him. And each one of us can say that at one point during our last 16 issues, we pestered at least one teacher or student for a quote for an article.

After all the hard work and stressful press nights, we made it! We learned a lot on the way and we all shared a special experience together that is like no other in this school. Congratulations members of Volume 83 and thanks for the great ride.

Tigernet

Tigernet works to provide a link to Newton North that everyone can find resourceful. This task was made more difficult when many of last year's seniors graduated, leaving little student participation. Computer department head, Chris Murphy, who has assumed the responsibilities of keeping the website running, has delegated updates to specific departments. For example, the assistant principal updates the calendar section on a weekly basis. Housemasters and other administrative faculty members can update their own sections. There are also links to websites that teachers have created as well as original student work such as games, puzzles, and a 360 degree view of North's athletic fields. The library, athletics department, and PTSO do its own pages, which can be accessed from Tigernet. Said Murphy, "We would like our website to be the starting place for anyone who is interested in about anything that is related to Newton North."

"It's a girl!" or "It's a boy!" were the first words our parents heard when we were born, defining our lives by our gender. Next, came our names, chosen from one of two categories: Danielle or Daniel, Jen or John, Mary or Mark. And then, we were given our birth certificates, our first proof of existence. The first two items on mine read "Danielle Leigh Grassian, female." Clearly, gender was very important. So, then what did it mean to be female?

Did it simply refer to my anatomy? Or was it something more? Gender has become our most defining trait: the ultimate dividing factor on sports teams, in stores, and even in schools. Girls wear tight skirts and stockings, while boys wear baggy pants and ties. Even going to the bathroom requires going in the correct door. If we are all unique, why do these two labels dominate our entire lives? Perhaps you haven't thought about gender. It is such a mundane concept that thinking about it seems strange. Yet, when you refer to someone, the only trait you identify is their gender: he or she. We're not just people. We're men and we're women. Like many other languages, even our pronouns are gender-specific: he, she; her, him. However, other countries simply have pronouns, simply a person not 'him' or 'her'.

Another expectation comes with your gender, perhaps the most important: love. As did Cinderella, the Little Mermaid, Snow White, and all of Disney's princesses - girl finds boy, girls falls in love with boy, girl marries boy. Where's princess Vivian, who married Prince Rona? I now pronounce you wife and . . . wife? Does she not exist or does society tell us she doesn't exist? Why can't she exist to us? Do they not fit in society's gender roles of strong men caring for their weak wives? For so long women simply cleaned up after men, while men controlled not only their wives, but the world. In the past hundred years, women's role in society had improved drastically and many believe the genders to be on equal terms.

Well, separate but equal. In Brown vs. the Board of Education our government determined that separating blacks and whites was wrong.

Separation is not a part of equality. Yet, in our society men and women are not ways to describe humans, they are two completely different sects of humanity, each with their own preconceived stereotypes and images. No matter how equal men and women's societal roles are, separate is never equal, just different. Men follow one path, one lined with Dockers, football, and Lindsay Lohan. Women go the opposite way, with stilettos, ballet, and Johnny Depp. So what about everyone who doesn't fit these two categories of people?

Do they not exist to society? Are they different? Walking down the street, people stare. They can't help it. I don't fit their mold. Is that a girl? Why is her hair like that? Why are her clothes like that? Is she with another girl? People constantly try to determine my gender.

Though they don't know me, they are bothered that their connections to a girl or a boy don't fit me. To them, I'm something else. An alien? A heshe? Or, have I not let my gender define me? Have I just been who I am, without the female stereotypes I was born with?

Our gender can be part of us, but it does not have to be us. Gender does not control our lives. We can simply be people, meeting other people, loving other people.

To Be GLAD Day Student Speak Out

Note: This speech is directed at the bigots of our society. So if you are not a bigot, thank you, and please know that I am not attacking you.

I am pissed.
You have no idea.
Wanna write me off as just another angry lesbian?
I dare you.
But first let me warn you

I am going to be the first female president
To have a first lady
And I am going to paint the white house lavender.
And you better believe that I'm gonna push my agenda.

During my inauguration speech,
I will say that my top priority is to give these people back their freedoms.
Oh, don't worry American public; I will fight terrorism, that will be first on my agenda.

To fight the terrorism at home.
Terrorism against Queers
Women
People of color
Terrorism against the constitution
Terrorism against family values.

There is a queer kid killing himself, because he can't express his love

Somewhere in this country
There is a women being raped because our society thinks it is ok to mistreat
women
Somewhere in this country
There is a black man sitting because the color of his skin is all the jury saw.

Somewhere in this country
There are people trying to rewrite the constitution to restrict people's rights.
Somewhere in this country
Parents are teaching their kids that morals means to hate fags, the morals mean to condemn them to hell.

You say you don't agree with my lifestyle?
Well I don't want to hear it, cuz
I don't agree with your lifestyle
Your lifestyle of hate, of fear, of oppression.

Damn straight, I am an angry lesbian
And I am proud of it
And don't think that I'm going to sit by and Let you kill my queer brothers and sisters
Let you take away my rights
Let you scare me away from my girlfriend's kisses.

I will stand up, I will stand up
And I will take my rainbow
machete
And I will fight through your jungle of hate
And I will make it to the

Because there is a pot of gold waiting for me
And you better believe that I won't let you hold me back.

A New SpilN

400 pages of articles, pictures, captions, sidebars, and designs. Thousands of students and hundreds of faculty pics. A full week of brainstorming every possible "iN" word. And, of course, deadlines. In the end, all you can do is look back and say, "How did that ever get finished?" With the help of over thirty staff members, four section editors, one adviser, and one amazing editor-in-chief, we somehow managed to pull through.

We hope you like this year's edition of the 90 year-old tradition of Newton North's yearbook, the Newtonian. Many hours of hard work and dedication went into it, but it was all worth it for the opportunity to create a book that reflects our unique school and community.

Newton North is more than just a building; it is the thriving student body and faculty that inhabit it. As freshmen arrive, and seniors depart, Newton North changes in kind. We have made many changes in this year's book to accommodate that. These changes include a shortened opening, expanded organizations, academics, and performing arts sections, a more focused theme, and an upgrade in spring sports. In recent years, yearbooks have trended toward a more graphic-oriented, "magazine-like" form. Hopefully, these changes will help better reflect the times and the changing world around us.

In the yearbook, we try to incorporate all aspects of our school into one (relatively) small book. This is hardly an easy task with a school as large as North. Trying to achieve this has been an adventure and given us all a broader view of our remarkable school. We hope you enjoy reading this as much as we enjoyed making it!

Executive Board Editor-in-Chief, senior Becca Schumer plans out deadlines in the yearbook office. More deadlines meant more efficiency and production this year. Decisions, Decisions. . . . Academics and Performing Arts editor, junior Abby Ryan and staff member, senior Xeni Mitropoulos discuss possible articles for the science spread. Academics articles were themed around the department they were representing in style and form. Point and Click Staff members, freshmen Caroline DiPaolo and Madison LiDonni work on an Athletics spread after school. With new computer software, designs can be more complex than ever before.

can you make the connection?

Mug shot. Name. Mug shot. Name. With 2134 students and 400 staff combined, North is an edifice full of unique faces and varying names. You look at their features, search your memory, and link face to name. It's kinetic. We are all part of the same human race. We are all part of the same community. Your pictures only represent so much of who you are. Show the world who you are iNside. Don't let your exterior appearance overshadow your iNterior personality. Flow from the iNside out.

"Class Position" Seniors Emma Cohan, Alexi Paraschos, Rebecca Schumer, and juniors Ely Goldberg, and Abby Ryan. Class Position Group photos were taken after the '05 class picture. Nicaraguan Discussions Seniors Abby Fisher, Julie Caplow, and Drew Vello discuss plans for the new Nicaragua Club that they started. paused performance Freshmen Ryan Garvan and Marissa Dungan stop their rehearsals during class to listen to teacher Mr. Brown shortly after they returned to their performance. Stretch for the stars Senior Andrew MacKinnon stretched before another game of foursquare during his Eblock lifetime class with Mr. Bower. Conjested Hallways Seniors, juniors, sophomores, and freshmen all share the hallways of Newton North; sometimes with traffic jams. Study time Juniors Cara Zeizer, Lena Weinstein, and Jayme Daniels use their frees to study together, well study!

His last AP English class.. oh, but, wait, there's always next year for a "retiring teacher."

"For life is quite absurd...you must always face the curtain with a bow!" (Eric Idle) I bow to the memory of Mr. Mechem who reminded us all that teaching is a virtue. I bow to Mary Janigan and to Brenda Keegan who always gave me the freedom to teach. I bow to teachers who taught me about the poetry of friendship: Norman & Gary & John & Lyn & Richie & Chuck & George & Cappy! I bow to the students of Newton North who've made it the only place to teach in America... to the Newton Lacrosse players...and finally to the wondrous Lughnasa "family" who after my 35 years of theatre at Tiger High have reminded me again of the pure joy of excellence.

Working to liNk . . .

how will you leave your mark?

Outreach. Spread. Share. Our school is but a microcosm of the whole. We can make our community safer and stronger. By considering our neighbors, we make our school better. Be inspired and inspire others. Build lasting ties and relationships. Venture. Uplift. Support. Practice inclusion daily. Our community reaches past the red brick building, into Newton and beyond, encompassing all that we touch and care for. Recognize. Respect. Appreciate. Isolation is not an option. Welcome and embrace our entire community to form a tight, unbreakable liNk.

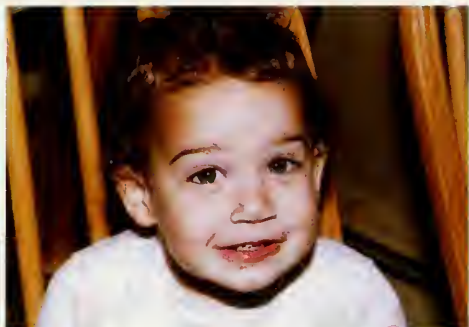

Group Laugh Faculty members Mr. Staulo and Ms. Novinsky chat behind sophomores Casey Goddard, Rachel Schertzer, and junior Jesse Grillo. Jokin' Around Seniors Jon Jaffee and Jon Battat of the Improv Club show off some of their humor at Club Day. All of the school's many clubs turned out for Club Day, September 27, hoping to recruit new members and show their skills. Sit and practice While rehearsing for a new Theatre Ink production on October 25, junior Garland Mason takes a seat in the Little Theatre. The show will soon go up on stage and every rehearsal counts. What a Stretch! Senior Andrew MacKinnon, of Mr. Bower's E-1 Lifetime class, takes the time to stretch after warming up. After a group of recess games, stretching relaxed the muscles and prepared the students for more physical activities. Non-stop Classes never seem to end for juniors Cara Zeisel, Elena Weinstein, and Jayme Daniels, who continue their studies in the library during frees. Frees became an issue this year as the back hallways closed and the library grew full. Big Challenge No book is too big for senior Santiago Reyes, who uses his time at the library to study for his classes. Challenging academic courses sent students scrambling for the valued resources in the library. SENIOR SPIRIT Seniors Mackie McKenzie, Carolyn Herlehy, Shayna Bauchner, and Lena Andrews show their pride as the class of 2005, after taking the senior picture on September 30. After the first early release day of the year, most seniors decided to gather on the football field for the annual senior picture in the shape of their year.

TO OUR SENIORS

As 2004 draws to a close we remember our seniors with this poem and a rose. On a hot August day preseason began, Our muscles ached as we ran and ran. In our first two tourneys we struggled to score But you rallied us together and we're discouraged no more. Wellesley got lucky when they beat us 0-1 So we worked even harder to get the job done. In the next thirteen games we were 8-1- and 4 And only one team could better our score. We missed tournament last season for the first time in years

But this year we made it so let's all give four cheers
To our seniors who have led us from that first day in the sun
And continue to push us until the last game is won.
To Britt our tireless midfielder who seems to be everywhere you're great on your feet and even better in the air.
Here's to Angelamaria our unbeatable sweeper,

An impenetrable force protecting our keeper. To Jo's strength on the outside controlling the ball, She's small but she's mighty and gives it her all.

Keveny, though injured, you've got great leadership skills, You've battled beside us and shared all our thrills.
All four seniors we love you and we'll always remember
From one hot August morn, to a cold eve in November
You pushed us to fight and to give it our best
Now the state tournament is our final test.

The Team

Looking back, high school seems instantaneous. A blink of an eye. You woke up. You made your way to Lowell Avenue. You attended your classes and worked hard. You studied. You read. You memorized. You learned how to internalize information and make it part of who you are and where you will go. The choices you made here last for a lifetime. What will you do next? How will you use your education outside in the real world? Will you go to college? Get a job? These decisions will help to decide your future, although you always have the power to change directions. For you seniors, now that you've graduated, your decisions must be more instantaneous then ever. As the underclass students will soon see, high school goes by in a flash. You think four years is long, but looking back it is one quick instant of adventure, slight panic and then ultimately, years of cherished friendship and memories. Live according to your instincts. Be empowered by who you are. Be proud of what you've accomplished while at NNHS. You control your future. Remember that. Never forget where you came from. KINETIC energy flows working to link those who join within it. Now think hard, go for the win and find where you belong. entertain all notions. Decisions. instantaneous.
